FROHMAN, KLEIN AND ELBERT HUBBARD ARE LOST WITH VANDERBILT

Believed Only Fifty-One Out of 188 of United States Citizens of English Vessel Have Been Rescued—Struck While at Lunch.

Famous Americans who went down with the Lusitania:

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT.

CHARLES FROHMAN, noted theatrical producer.

CHARLES H. KLEIN, celebrated theatrical writer and producer, author of "The Lion and the Mouse."

ELBERT HUBBARD (Fra Elburtus), editor of the "Philistine", famous American publicist, and wife.

NEW YORK, May 8. — At 3:00 p. m. 138 American first class passengers who sailed on the Lusitania had not been accounted for either in the official bulletins from the Cunard company or in dispatches from London and Queenstown. These include twenty nine passengers who booked on the Cameronia but took passage on the Lusitania when the Cameronia was commandeered by the British government.

QUEENSTOWN, Ireland, May 8.—Germany's submarine warfare cost 1,346 lives when the giant Lusitania was torpedoed and sunk a scant eight miles off the Irish coast. Of those probably more than 100 were citizens of the United States. In that number are now included the names of Alfred G. Vanderbilt, multi-millionaire; Charles Frohman, theatrical magnate; Charles Klein, noted playwright; Elbert Hubbard and others well known in England and the United States. No trace can be found of them and their friends who have been searching the villages of the south Irish coast late today reluctantly expressed the belief that they must have perished.

The latest available figures show that only 703 of the Lusitania's company were saved. Many of them are in a precarious condition from immersion and injuries received when the bottom of the leviathan was almost literally torn out by the explosion of two torpedoes and other explosions within the vessel's hull, presumably among ammunition in her cargo. All are penniless and have only the clothing they stand in. Tender women were rescued after hours spent in the water buoyed up by life belts, and it is feared many of them will die.

Most of the survivors who are able to travel left here this afternoon for Kingston and from there they will proceed to Holyhead and thence to their various destinations. Captains C. M. Miller and A. Castle, U. S. A., from the American embassy in London, have arrived here under instructions from Ambassador Page to care for the Americans, to furnish them with funds and everything else needed.

No Chance for More

The naval officials here say that there is now practically no chance of any additional persons being saved. The boats that were sent to the scene of the tragedy raked the sea for miles around. It is not known whether all of the boats that were launched have actually been located, but officials say those that have not been located must long ago have foundered.

Patrol vessels will keep a close watch on the scene in an endeavor to locate any additional bodies that may come to the surface. Sixty bodies have already been placed in the morgue in Queenstown. Others will

Crew Orderly

Latest advices from the Lusitania tragedy say that the crew was orderly during the final moments of the tragedy and did their best to launch their boats. Most of the survivors agree that two torpedoes struck the Lusitania, one completely shattering her engine room.

The first torpedo struck absolutely without warning in the stokehold. Splinters of steel flew high in the air and the great boat shook from stern to stem. Almost immediately afterward another explosion followed. The second torpedo completed the tragedy. Fumes from the explosion permeated every section of the smashed steamer. Many of the passengers fell to the deck unconscious. Others staggered to the boats and were helped on board.

The steamer was listing to starboard and many of her boats were useless.

Boat Capsizes

That at least one of the Lusitania's boats loaded with women and children capsized after it had been launched was stated here today by Bertrand Jenkins of New York. He said that he had helped two women into the boat, one of them being Miss Bramwell, an opera singer of New York. The boat turned over after striking the water and only a few of those on board were rescued by another boat.

D. A. Thomas, Welsh colliery owner, who was among the saved, told a story of his experience. He said: "We were at luncheon when suddenly the vessel was stopped and shook from stern to stem with the force of an explosion well forward, that seemed to throw her on her beam ends. We had not believed it possible that an attack would be made upon us but there was not a passenger who did not realize that the unexpected had happened. The explosion was followed by another

German Warning Again

NEW YORK, May 8.—The German embassy again today printed its advertisement in the New York papers warning Americans that travel toward Great Britain and France is dangerous, and that all persons taking passage on ships flying the flag of Great Britain and her allies do so at their own risk.

This advertisement appeared originally a week ago just before the Lusitania sailed. Following on yesterday's sailing on the Transylvania fear was expressed that submarines may be in waiting for it as they were for the Lusitania.

equally forcible, and the big steamer shuddered and almost immediately began to list to port.

Little Panic Shown

"Officers and men rushed to their stations almost without orders, and the work of clearing the boats was begun. There was little panic so far as I could see; everyone was too dazed to realize just what actually

Incident Brings a Great Boom in Recruiting and Stirs England to Depths

LONDON, May 8.—The sinking of the Lusitania has brought about a political crisis in England. It is already certain that the government will be swamped with pointed inquiries when parliament reconvenes on Monday.

Lord Charles Beresford stated he will interrogate Premier Asquith. There will be a volley of questions for the officials of the government, as a number of members favor reprisals of equal violence directed against Germany.

Officials are anxiously awaiting information as to what action Washington plans to take. They want to know to what extent President Wilson plans to follow up his threats in the note addressed to Germany

Berlin Jubilant

COPENHAGEN, May 8.—The Berlin newspapers today proclaim in headlines of colossal type the torpedoing of the Lusitania and declare that Germany has registered a new triumph for her naval policy. The editorial comment generally declares that England received what she deserved.

last February. It is understood here the government will exchange views with Washington during the week end so that an understanding can be reached before parliament reconvenes Monday.

An enormous crowd besieged the Cunard offices all night and increased as day broke. All were anxious to learn the fate of relatives on board the lost Lusitania. The line officials said they were endeavoring to perfect a list of survivors but that this work would be delayed, as some had been landed at one port and some at another. They said there was little doubt that the list of saved would be less than seven hundred.

Relatives Ask After Escort

Relatives of survivors were angrily asking why no effort was made to protect the Lusitania. They pointed out that it has been known for a week that an attack was to have been made on the big liner but that not a single destroyer—the real foe of the submarine—had been detached to act as an escort for her from the Atlantic.

Today's confirmation of the heavy loss of life in the torpedoing of the Lusitania which London last night disbelieved has stirred England more than anything else since the declaration of war.

Recruiting throughout the empire today had greatly stimulated, and large numbers are expected to flock to the colors over the week end. The spirit of vengeance seems at last to have penetrated the British calm and there is a far greater indignation everywhere expressed against the Germans than ever before.

The Manchester Guardian today after reviewing the tragedy, says: "The submarine campaign now has entered into a new phase which is marked by even greater recklessness

U. S. POWERLESS IN LUSITANIA CASE IS GENERAL OPINION

"Don't Rock the Boat" Pleads Senator
Stone Who Holds That Americans
On the Lost Vessel Were
There Knowing of the Risk After Official Warning From Germany

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Senator Stone, chairman of the foreign relations committee of the senate, issued the following statement at noon concerning the Lusitania's destruction:

"The tragedy is of course to be profoundly regretted. If the reports as to the loss of life are true, the sympathies of the civilized world will be deeply stirred, but for us, it seems to me that good sense dictates that we keep our heads until we get our bearings. It is a bad time to get rattled and act impulsively. Don't 'rock the boat.'

"Without expressing an opinion as to our relations to this event or as to our duty in the premises, there are some facts we cannot overlook and are bound to consider. We cannot overlook the fact that the Lusitania was a British ship flying the British flag, and subject at any time to be put into the actual service of the government.

THE RECORD

NEW YORK, May 8.—Cunard line at 11 o'clock today issued a revised statement which showed that the total on board the Lusitania when she sailed from this port was 2,049.

They were divided as follows:
First cabin 286
Second cabin 625
Third cabin 288

Total passengers 1,199
Officers and crew 850

Total on board 2,049
Previous figures had said there were 2,160 on the liner.

According to the latest revised figures, the number lost is 1,346.

Known Survivors Among Cabin Passengers

First cabin:
First cabin passengers .. 391
Known to be saved 24
Others probably saved .. 3
x Unaccounted for 338
Second cabin:
Second cabin passengers 601
Known to be saved 24
Others probably saved .. 5
Unaccounted for 572
x—Cabled names somewhat resembling those of passengers listed, probably errors in transmission.

In addition to the identified survivors, names of 37 survivors not on the Lusitania's passenger list have been cabled. These probably represented cable errors.

FEW OFFICERS SAVED

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Cunard line officially announced that it had received advices showing that Captain Turner, First Officer Jones, Second Officer Lewis, the second and third engineers and 51 members of the crew have been rescued. They are included in the total of 703 previously announced as saved.

ART NOTICE

The art exhibit will be open Sunday.

"Indeed, it is said, that at the time she was attacked she was carrying military reservists to England for service in the British army. True, there were American citizens aboard, but it must not be forgotten that they went aboard a belligerent ship with full knowledge of the risk, and after official warning by the German government. When on board a British vessel they are on British soil. Was not their position substantially equivalent to being within the walls of a fortified city? If American citizens stay within a city besieged or threatened and the enemy attacks, what would our government do if our citizens should be injured?"

"I express no opinion at this time. I am mere saying why we should not 'rock the boat' until we know what we are about.

"Aside from the possible loss of American lives let us ask ourselves just where we come in.

Gulflight Case Worse
"At the present moment and with the light now before me, I confess that it appears to me that from our standpoint as a neutral nation the Gulflight case presents a more delicate and serious complication than the case of the Lusitania."

There was no doubt this afternoon that the Washington administration deemed itself powerless in the Lusitania case. This judgment was based on personal and confidential expressions by executive officials who were not yet ready to go publicly on record by name. The view was held, however, by an overwhelming majority—almost all, in fact—of those who would speak at all.

Their opinion was backed openly by such men as Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee and Senator Hoke Smith of Georgia, whose ideas were almost exactly in line with those of the Missouri law maker.

Looked at cold-bloodedly, officials said, the Germans seemed to have by no means had legal defense even assuming that they torpedoed the liner—as good as in the Falaba case and much better than in those of the Frye, Cushing and Gulflight.

Ask Explanation
The state department today asked Berlin for a report on the Lusitania disaster. It expressed a desire that it be based on the statement of the submarine commander who made the attack—assuming that the liner was sunk by a submarine.

In effect the kaiser's foreign office was asked if Germany was responsible for the Lusitania's loss with that of Americans on board. If so, full details were wanted. The re-

The TRIBUNE'S Daily Short Story

ALGERNON MUDGE, CHAPERON

BY FANNY KENDERDINE

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

A bellboy had just brought the telegram to Mrs. Ramsey. She regarded it with vexed resignation. "Girls," she said, addressing her pretty daughters, "you must go home with me. Mrs. Kittredge wires me that she will be in Boston on the 25th—tomorrow—to make me the long-promised visit. Of all times in the world to come."

"But, mother," objected Katharine, "why can't you write Mrs. Kittredge and tell her to visit us here in New York? We can have heaps more fun."

Mrs. Ramsey shook her head. "Impossible. Celia Kittredge is my dear friend and circumstances have combined so that she has never been able to visit me in my home. Coming direct from British Columbia her first stop will be at my home. I must be there to greet her."

Her tone was final. "There is no reason why we should not remain until after the Beasley concert," began Rosalind, but the look on her mother's face checked her words.

"Unchaperoned?" asked Mrs. Ramsey in horror. "Find us a chaperon for the remainder of the week and then we'll come home and help entertain Mrs. Kittredge," urged Katharine.

"My dear, I don't know a man in town of whom I would ask such a favor, but there is my cousin, Algernon Mudge—you will remember that I have told you that he was custodian of a private library and museum—he would be a most valuable guide for you during the remainder of your stay."

Algernon Mudge! Visions of his portrait in an obscure corner of the library at home assailed the mental vision of the girls. Cousin Algernon Mudge was small and pale and very learned looking. His little moonlike face was almost obscured by a pair of huge tortoise-shell rimmed spectacles.

Surely one would be safe with Algernon Mudge, their mother's second cousin. "I will write him a note and ask him to call, and Rosalind, pack my bag—Katharine, order a taxi and look up a train—no look up the train first, goosies—and then wire Hannah Mary to have James meet me at the station. Oh, dear, we have been planning this New York trip so long and I do hate to go home and miss the concert."

While Mrs. Ramsey sighed and wrote her note the girls flew around obeying her commands. At 2 o'clock they returned from the Central Station and faced each other across the luncheon table in the hotel restaurant.

"Kathie," said Rosalind, "Cousin Algernon has received mother's note by this time."

Katharine sipped her buillon. "Did you send the note by special messenger?" she asked, wide-eyed.

"Of course."

"Then he will call this afternoon."

I was hoping we might have time to get used to the idea of having him around."

"If he is away—or cannot officiate—mother said we were to go home at once," reminded Rosalind.

When they reached their sitting room they were confronted by a servant bearing the card of Mr. Algernon Mudge.

All this for the benefit of a little, near-sighted student!

"Come!" said Katharine, and they went down to the red parlor where the visitor awaited them.

But the only occupant of the red parlor was a tall, big-framed young man, smartly arrayed in most fashionable clothes.

Where was Algernon Mudge, the expected chaperon?

The handsome young man gazed expectantly at the two girls.

"Oh," murmured Katharine in confusion, "I thought he said Cousin Algernon was here."

The young man bowed profoundly. "I am here," he said pleasantly.

"You—you are mistaken," said Rosalind haughtily. "We are looking for our cousin, Mr. Mudge."

"I am Algernon Mudge," insisted the youth, placing a card on the table. "My father is laid up with an attack of rheumatic gout and he sent me—as a sort of substitute chaperon. I hope you don't mind."

The girls looked at each other in dismay. They knew what their mother would have said under the circumstances.

Katharine looked appealingly at her elder sister.

"We didn't know that Cousin Algernon had a son," confessed Rosalind. "We thought he was a childless widower. But we are glad to see you, Cousin Algernon; but we were surprised."

"No wonder," said Algernon, shaking hands vigorously. "Expecting a neat little chaperon like dad, and finding me."

"I'm sorry, but I'm afraid you won't do," sighed Rosalind.

"Too young—and attractive?" He laughed outright.

"Entirely too young," corrected Katharine, with mocking eyes. "We are so sorry about dear Cousin Algernon. I suppose we shall have to go home," she ended in a sigh.

"Oh, bother!" said young Algernon.

Cousin Algernon squeezed her hand gently.

"A reliable chaperon usually arranges a desirable marriage," he hinted, "and, remember, Sally, that I am alone, too—and, well—if I had met years ago we would have been sweethearts. What do you think, eh?"

Mrs. Ramsey blushed.

"I don't know, Cousin Algernon—but they say—it's never too late."

But Algernon Mudge did not wait for her to complete the sentence.

BANGOR MAN DIES MARRIED ONE WEEK

Luverne Wood Dies at Traverse City, Mich.; Was the Son of Late Mrs. Cora Bradley, West Salem

WEST SALEM, Wis., May 8.—(Special.)—Luverne Wood, son of the late Mrs. Cora Bradley, died at his home in Traverse City, Mich., on Tuesday of hemorrhage. He is survived by a widow, a bride of a week and a brother. Mr. Wood was a visitor in the village last summer.

George Darling Dies
George Darling of Alden, Ill., for many years a resident of Bangor, died Monday of cancer. His brother, Aaron, and niece, Mrs. Ernst Hussa, left Wednesday to attend the funeral.

Local and Personal
F. C. Witt sold his restaurant on Saturday to George Harms of Reno, Minn. The consideration was $3,000.

N. M. Elsen sold the Elsen House and buffet to Peter Burbach. Mr. Burbach will take possession July 1.

Miss Hedwig Fuchs entertained a party of friends at her home Wednesday evening, the occasion being her birthday anniversary.

John L. Putnam, the new manager of the lumber company, has leased the Charles Gerletti house and will move his family here from Columbus, soon.

Leo Rediske and Miss Maud Tobin were married Wednesday at the home of the bride's parents, in Langford, S. D. After a wedding trip they will be at home to their friends in Mr. Rediske's house.

Miss Lula Elsen spent Friday at West Salem.

H. Selebrede and son, Carl, transacted business in Sparta Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Kneen went to Madison Wednesday to attend the funeral of Mr. Storer. Mr. Storer frequently visited here.

W. H. Preston has purchased the auto of Louis Merlo, which was formerly owned by William Smith.

It is reported that O. Mossey will move to Dodgeville, where he will open up a ten cent store.

William Walter's new house is almost completed.

Bernie Darling lost a horse Monday, worth about $200.

non. "Let me take you about a bit. How long have you been here?"

"Arrived last night," announced Rosalind, tragically.

"Say, that's bad luck, isn't it? Ever been here before?"

"No; we live in Boston, and it hasn't seemed—seemed necessary," went on Rosalind. "But now we are here there are so many things we wanted to see; just common everyday 'sights' that you will laugh at."

"For instance?" he suggested pleasantly.

"Oh, Grant's tomb—the Statue of Liberty—Central Park—the Bronx Zoo—the Aquarium—the Flatiron building and the Woolworth—"

"And Brooklyn bridge and Staten Island," added Katharine defiantly; "and all the old-fashioned bits of old New York. Laugh, if you want to," she pouted.

"There's nothing to laugh at," he assured them earnestly. "Do you know, I've spent lots of time in New York, but I haven't seen all the places you tell about. Let's start right off—now! We can go to our house and have dinner with dad—he's your chaperon, you know—I'm only a substitute."

The girls went away with Algernon Mudge and from the moment they mounted to the roof of a Fifth avenue hotel until hours afterward they were set down at the Mudge home in Washington square, they forgot everything save that they were seeing things about which they had read and talked of for years.

And Algernon Mudge, senior, sort of balanced matters by proving to be exactly as they had pictured him—save that he was the most charming and delightful of hosts.

"I didn't want to disappoint your mother, my dears," he said patting their hands; "so I just sent my big boy along. Algie works too hard anyway. A little play will do no harm."

After dinner Jack Kenyon, a friend of Algie, dropped in and Cousin Algernon insisted upon music. And the next day there were four who set forth upon adventure in Manhattan.

It was a double wedding the following October.

After Katharine and Algie and Rosalind and Jack had left the house, Mrs. Ramsey looked at Cousin Algernon Mudge, who beamed back at her through his goggles.

"I—I'm afraid you're an irresponsible chaperon," sighed Mrs. Ramsey. "Through you I've lost both my girls."

Cousin Algernon squeezed her hand gently.

"A reliable chaperon usually arranges a desirable marriage," he hinted, "and, remember, Sally, that I am alone, too—and, well—if I had met years ago we would have been sweethearts. What do you think, eh?"

Mrs. Ramsey blushed.

PARENTS TO MEET TEACHERS AT HIGH IN BIG "MIXER"

Parents of high school pupils, teachers and students will all congregate at the high school Wednesday evening in a general "mixer" given by the Parents' and Teachers' association of the high school.

Last year a meeting of this kind was held and was a success from every standpoint as teachers and parents could become acquainted more easily when pupils were at hand to introduce them to each other. Only a short business session will be held in the auditorium after which the meeting will adjourn to the gymnasium where an informal session will be held. Work done in the domestic science and drawing departments of the high school will be on exhibit. Refreshments will be served.

Daddy's Bedtime

The Story the Story— Snowshoes Told.

THE moccasins and the sabots have both told their stories," said daddy.

"Now, kiddies, I think the snowshoes must tell their story."

"They were a pair of very little snowshoes, and they were in the same glass case, together with the moccasins and sabots of which I told you. The case was in a museum."

"The little snowshoes were with a pair of big snowshoes. Both pairs looked as if they had been worn a good deal, as if they had traveled far."

"And the little snowshoes seemed to tell this story to the man who was watching them."

"We used to work ever and ever so long ago, sir, and we wish we were working now. We feel that there is ever and ever so much work left in us. But we have to just rest here and be stared at. What's the use of being stared at? We had rather be out shuffling over the snow."

"We belonged to a little boy who was the son of a trapper and guide who lived up in the Maine woods. The larger pair of snowshoes next to us belonged to this guide, and he made us to walk on his little boy. Don't we look funny? Something like tennis rackets, don't we?"

"Well, the guide could walk over the snow in the big snowshoes without the least trouble because he was used to it, you see. But the little boy was new at it, and he had lots of trouble in learning to use us, like everybody does who is not used to snowshoes. You see, people have to walk on us with their legs spread wider than as if they were walking without us, and when they first begin to use us they get all tangled up, and they fall down."

"So it was with us. The little boy would take a step or two, and then he would make one of us take a step upon the other, and down he would go right on his back in the snow. And he would rise up with his face all full of snow and crying very hard because he was so angry at the snow and at us and at everything. And his father would stand there laughing and tell him to try it again. And we did our best to help him, and finally he learned to walk on us just as well as his father on his larger ones."

"Well, what fun we used to have then, and the little boy with us. He would take us very fast over the snow, and the little boy would carry a little gun and shoot game and visit the traps with his father, and they would have the best times together."

"That was long ago. The little boy grew to be a man, and he and his father went away. And some one found us and brought us here. We wish we were back in the woods and the snow."

LUSITANIA INCIDENT

The correctness of Senator Stone's statement that, in torpedoing the British liner, Lusitania, and sending some 1,500 non-combatants to the bottom of the sea, Germany was within her rights as a belligerent under the international law of war, may be taken for granted. However, because of modern conditions and methods new questions may be raised.

A German warship, apprehending the Lusitania, would have taken her as a prize, landing the non-combatants and giving liberty to at least the neutral passengers. Had a warship, without warning, raked the liner, killing non-combatants, the incident would have been the occasion for a storm of protest compared with which criticism of the invasion of Belgium were the mildest of objections. Because had the slow submarine made its presence known the Lusitania would have shown her a pair of heels, to be effective the blow must be struck suddenly, as from ambush. That is the excuse—is it sufficient?

Perhaps in the readjustment after the war a new code affecting passenger ships and submarines may be established. Meantime the probably unquestionable right of the German navy, or any navy engaged in war, to take and destroy ships of any class owned by a hostile nation whenever found outside of neutral waters, will hardly serve to appease civilization's verdict that no end was attained sufficient to justify this deliberate and wholesale destruction of non-combatants.

However, complaint against the act of destruction has no sounder basis as affecting American or other neutral passengers than it has in relation to the English passengers. The protest is against wholesale slaying of defenseless non-combatants. As to the Americans, they accepted an apparent hazard in the face of warnings. Had these Americans deliberately walked upon a battlefield under the flag of a belligerent nation, there would be little sympathy for them or excuse for their folly. Yet sailing upon the ship of a belligerent nation through the perils surrounding entry of a blockaded port, was hardly more sensible.

England may fairly be censured for failure to provide a naval escort for the Lusitania, at least through the waters under blockade. If the government of the United States is at fault, probably it is in its failure to issue emphatic warning to citizens against taking these chances. The state department has given publicity to German diplomatic warnings of this nature, but so far as we have observed has never reinforced them with an official warning of its own, as was done in the case of American citizens in Mexico pending the early troubles in the latter country.

THE SAVING GRACE OF THE FISH STORY

In these times of horror and all the attendant evils of war, there remains to save the mental balance the refreshing influence of humor. We laugh louder, if less merrily, when under sustained nervous strain. That is what Kipling meant when he spoke of the American "laughing mid his deed."

Even the "acid Asiatic mirth" affords some relief, and if in these calamitous times we inordinately seek mirth, "its mental strain, not carelessness of graver things. And so we are glad to note that, among our humorous excesses, the valorous old fish liar's contributions are more numerous and more daring than ever.

The locus in quo is of little concern, so what if John Kemp did go all the way to Joliet to find his inspiration and actors to stage this one:

A huge fish, with a beak like a bird extending a foot from its head, which barked like a dog when it attacked a rowboat, yesterday fought a twenty-minute battle with Arthur A. Lennon, a Joliet merchant, and Lem Northem, proprietor of the Hotel Munroe.

Harvey E. Wood, mayor of Joliet, declares he saw the creature leap into the boat, bite Northem on the leg, and renew its assault with such ferocity the craft overturned. Then the fish, according to the solemn statements of all three men, fought the two fishermen, who were too astonished, they say, to resist.

The fish pursued the men as they swam desperately to shore, and Mayor Wood declares its bark could be heard half a mile.

As a bit of local diversion, we invite local nimrods to enter the lists against Mr. Kemp's importation. Surely Badger genius should be equal to the task of beating even this whopping stretch of imagination. Let the cheerful Ananias come forth.

MAHOMET GOES TO THE MOUNTAIN

Mr. Dewey's plan for mid-summer church meetings, to be held in the downtown section where they will attract the passing throngs, deserves consideration.

Many people will go to such meetings even though they be held off the beaten paths of the crowds, but those who are sufficiently interested to do so are not those most in need. The central location makes it possible to attract passers who would not seek the opportunity, and once their attention is fixed, to draw them back again.

That the meetings will be evangelical in their nature gives them genuine worth, for man-made theories are a poor substitute for gospel in the work of gripping and holding men and women.

A stingy man flatters himself that he's an economist.

We Need to Live

We need to live—for life is more Than eating, drinking, wearing, That seeking pleasures door to door, And hither, thither, faring, By artificial dress and speech

We teach the world to doubt us, And cry for riches out of reach While joy lies all about us.

We need to love—for life is more Than drinking, wearing, eating, The outer mortal striving for, The inner mortal cheating, The tinsel things of life we clutch While skies are blue above us, While here beside us at our touch Are those who long to love us.

We need to learn (for life is more Than wearing, eating, drinking), A little less of later lore And more of early thinking, We need to live and love and learn The simple things to cheer us, To truth established to return And learn the lesson near us.

His dog was a fierce Alredale, which could whip and had whipped every other bowwow in the neighborhood. Then he clipped his coat.

"Yes," he said to a friend, "the clipping was my own idea. I believe it made him look better, but it was very awkward for the dog."

"How was that?" queried the friend.

"Oh, the other dogs didn't know him. He had to fight them all over again."

Arthur sat on the front door steps crying softly.

"What is the matter, little boy?" asked a kind hearted woman who was passing.

"And it is a true one, too."

ECZEMA COVERED CHILDREN'S HEADS

Broke Out in Blisters. So Bad Could Hardly Bear To Wash Heads. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Children Were Healed.

Gilchrist, Mich.—"My two children were covered all over their heads with sore eruption which I was told was eczema. It broke out in blisters; a patch as large as a quarter would break out and on top of the sore was a scale. I cut the hair as near down to the head as I could when the first eruption broke out. The eruption was so bad I could hardly bear to wash their heads and there was not a spot as large as a pin on the head that was not broken out."

"I shampooed their hair, then rubbed the Cuticura Ointment on. After I had used the sample I bought one box of Ointment and one cake of Soap and I had not used all of them when the eruption had dried up and my children were healed." (Signed) Mrs. John Roiston, August 6, 1914.

"I wish to see Miss Bluffham," said the young man with brown shoes and red hair.

"She is not in, sir," answered the maid, with a glances that told of long practice in the ways of deceit.

"Are—are you sure?" faltered the youth, nervously twisting a mustache that only became apparent when attention was directed to it.

The maid's eyebrows elevated themselves.

"Do you doubt her word, sir?" she asked, reproachfully.

The new clergyman was sent for by an elderly lady. "Oh, sir, she said, 'I hope you will excuse my asking you to call, but when I heard you preach and pray last Sunday you did so remind me of my poor brother, who was took from me, that I felt I must speak with you.'"

"And how long ago did your poor brother die?" asked the clergyman, sympathetically.

"Oh, sir, he isn't dead," was the reply, "he was took to the asylum."

CHAPTER XIX. In the Teeth of the Storm.

During the first night of that great march southward they had sung lustily—keeping in swinging stride with the staccato rhythm of their songs. Now they were silent. No man spoke even to his neighbor. From time to time they exchanged glances—lightning, stealing glances, which passed unnoticed. But that was all. It was the only sign that they were still men.

The last village lay behind them. Two hundred miles away there was Sidi-bel-Abbes, where the officers of the French regiments sat beneath the gaily striped awnings and drank their coffee, and their ladies, gorgeous in Parisian fantasies, drove past on their way to the cooler outskirts. In those two hundred miles there had been many things—oases, Bedouin encampment, long silent caravans surging over the desert to the north, stretches of gray monotony, ranges of ochre-tinted hills to be skirted by stony gullies where once a torrent had raged—and over all the great ball of the sun—and eight days! Eight days! They had ceased to count. The mile-stones had disappeared. Their memories were blank. Mechanically as each distance of ten kilometers was forced behind them they dropped stupidly into the burning sand and five minutes later mechanically rose and went on again. At night their white camps stretched like a string of pearls into the darkness, and the bivouac fires shone brightly, but they did not sleep. They sat, huddled together to shelter against the blasting wind of the desert night, and stared in front of them, or at one another. Before then dawn broke they had marched on again. Their boots had been torn by the edged stones of the gullies, and one man left a thin trail of blood behind him. The leather straps of their knapsacks had cut festering sores into their shoulders, and their eyes were red-rimmed and bloodshot with the sand and the glare of the sun. But they neither cursed nor complained. Only from time to time they glanced at one another, and always with that smoldering, scorching interrogation, "Is it yet?"

Richard Farquhar marched at the head of his company with three other men. Because of his unflinching dogged step in those first few days, he had been made line-man. Now he tottered with the rest, and no one cared. An ammunition wagon, dragged by two scrawny beasts, divided his company from the first, and a young recruit who had fallen out had been tied by the shoulder to a pole thrust through the sides of the cart. For a mile or two he had marched like a man possessed, but now he was being dragged, a limp, apparently lifeless figure, over the stony sand. He also left a trail of blood behind him. This Farquhar had seen. The thin red streak seemed to get into his eyes and dye the whole arid inferno a maddening crimson. His hand tightened on the breech of his rifle. He felt a sudden insane desire to club the lieutenant in front of him to the ground. It was like a wave of red passion, gathered drop by drop from each aching sore and inflamed nerve, which had suddenly burst its dam, and pouring through every artery, flooded his brain with an ungovernable lust to kill. He felt a touch on his arm. It calmed him, steadied him miraculously. The red haze lifted. He still saw the dark significant line on the yellow sand, but it no longer stirred him. Only, like the magic blood of the dragon, it gave him a sudden knowledge of things unheard and unseen; it gave voice to the silence, a significance to the heavy dragging footsteps. There were forces about him which he had not realized—deadly curbed-in passions which tapped their coherent telegraphic messages on his acutely awakened instinct. "Is it yet? Is it yet?"

Gotz marched at his side—Gotz, the spruce, the imperturbable. He was the only man among them who held his head up, and his step was elastic with unwearied strength. On the other side there was Johann Harding, the little German doctor. He did not speak or even stumble, and yet Farquhar knew that the end was not far off. He too asked, "Is it yet?" and then there had been one more step forward, one more supreme effort of the will, and the end had not come. Farquhar shifted his rifle from one aching shoulder to the other. With his free hand he released his comrade's weapon from the stiffened, mechanical clasp, and stumbled on with his double burden. Gotz glanced round. At his authoritative, almost haughty gesture, Farquhar slipped behind to the doctor's left side, and between them they half dragged, half carried him. He glanced up at their faces with a stupefied incredulity, but he said nothing. Throughout no word had been spoken. The lieutenant strode on unconsciously. Only behind them the men glanced at one another and passed their swollen tongues over their lips, like hunger-maddened animals whose madness had become stealthy, terribly patient. "Is it yet?"

The day was cloudless. Since dawn no shadow had crossed the brazen monotony of withered azure. Yet there was darkness in the air as though light had burned up light itself, and the great ball of the sun had sunk behind a yellow transparent veil of smoldering, scorching ruin. From time to time the lieutenant glanced anxiously to the southeast where the veil was heaviest. A breeze had risen, but it bore no refreshment. It was hot and touched with fire. Each particle might have been an invisible flame which bit into the skin and ate a wide circle, as a spark eats away paper. And there was a restless moving of the sand beneath the tramping feet, a kind of swirl which rose and died down and rose again. Suddenly to the southeast the darkness gathered; the formless gloom hovering above the slow-moving line swept together in one stupendous shadow which rushed down upon them. Colonel Destinn saw it coming. He galloped furiously along the wavering, stricken line of men.

"Campez! campez! Each man for himself!"

Then it was upon them. The sun was blotted out. In the yellow darkness they could not see one another's face nor their own hands. They could not cry out or move. The sand was everywhere. It came like a blast out of hell's furnace and crept into their eyes, their mouths, their lungs, their very hearts. It burned within them till there was nothing left but fire. It eddied round their feet; they could feel it mounting—mounting steadily to their knees—a flood of molten lava which would not kill, and which yielded softly to their touch. And around them there shrieked the hurricane itself, an awful army of articulate, destroying myriads.

(To be Continued.)

But the man who is always complaining about his hard luck is usually too lazy to move in time to keep trouble from troubling him.

STRONG TEACHERS AT THE "W. B. U."

Never has the "W. B. U." faculty been as strong as it is right today, and the coming year it will be the strongest in its history.

Mr. B. J. Toland, expert accountant, has charge of the business department. He is a teacher who has trained probably as many students for difficult positions as any man living. He is exacting and thorough and the young man or woman who graduates under him is guaranteed a successful office experience.

Mr. C. C. Owen, also of the business department, has special charge of the penmanship work. Mr. Owen was with the Toland schools for a number of years before he recently located in La Crosse. His display of work recently in Hoehschler Brothers' window was one of the finest specimens of all around pen work ever witnessed in this city.

Mr. E. S. Hewen, manager of the Massey Business College, of Jacksonville, Fla., may also be a member of the business department faculty. He is recognized as one of the strong men of the profession. Mr. Ralph Toland has charge of the shorthand department.

W. B. U. stenographers have long been known to be the most competent in the entire northwest. Mr. Toland has had a long experience in not only preparing stenographers, but has developed many teachers.

Mr. Toland will be assisted by D. F. Powell. Never has the school been so strong, nor so satisfactorily organized in the faculty. The coming year promises to be the most successful in the history of the school and enrollments and applications have already been received for next September.

COUNTER DEMANDS OF CHINA HARSH DECLARES OKUMA

Japanese Premier Sends a Statement of Empire's Intentions to the United States

MUST EXCEPT NEW POSITION MAY 9

Premier Says Japan Has Made Concessions Which Are Now Up to Chinese

(In response to a cable request for a statement that would give the American public a clearer interpretation of Japan's point of view in the present, Chino-Japanese crisis, the premier, Count Okuma, today cabled to the United Press the following exclusive statement, the first official presentation to America of the Japanese policy.—The Editor.)

BY COUNT OKUMA
(Japanese Premier and Minister of the Interior.)

(Copyright, 1915, by the United Press. Copyright in Great Britain.)

TOKIO, May 8.—Your telegram to hand. The motives and objects of our negotiations with China are to meet the requirements of the altered conditions caused by the war with Germany; to bring closer relations with China by removing all causes of misunderstanding and thus ensure a permanent oriental peace.

China does not understand the Japanese sincerity and argument. Despite Japan's peaceful persuasion for over three months and our explanations that Japan is actuated only by an earnest desire to secure a peaceful settlement, and that we desire to restore Kio Chau to China subject to certain fair conditions and conciliation, she gave it no favorable consideration, and she has demanded the unconditional restoration of Kio Chau and also compensation for Japan for the unavoidable damages consequent on the battles in Shantung.

China clearly declared that her demands were final. The Japanese government seeing the object of its negotiations thus ignored and the dignity and prestige of Japan greatly impaired, but still hoping that a peaceful conclusion could be reached, decided to make some further concessions and to request China's reconsideration and acceptance before May 9. Our minister at Peking has been instructed accordingly.

quest was directed to Ambassador Gerard, in Berlin, to be presented to the German foreign office. Aside from this announcement, Secretary of State Bryan said:

"All we need to tell the public is that we are arriving at the facts as fast as possible and doing everything possible for the injured."

Pressed for details, the secretary admitted he had heard some one on the Lusitania saw a submarine's periscope.

Carried Contraband

"The Lusitania's manifest showed she carried for Liverpool 260,000 pounds of copper; 189 cases of military goods; 1,271 cases of ammunition; and for London 1,200 cases of cartridges.

"Vessels of that kind can be seized and destroyed under Hague rules without any respect to a war one. The Lusitania was a British auxiliary cruiser, a man-of-war. The passengers had had full warning, first by the German note in February, second by advertisements.

"Germany wants to do anything reasonable so as not to make the United States or its citizens suffer in any way but she cannot do so unless Americans will take necessary precautions to protect themselves from dangers of which they are cognizant.

"What Germany has done she has done by way of retaliation after her offer, through President Wilson, regarding submarine warfare was turned down and after Britain declared that the war was directed towards the 120,000,000 innocent non-combatants, women and children.

"Americans can do their own thinking when the facts are laid down before them."

iscope, seemingly bearing out the theory that the vessel was torpedoed. He would not particularize any further.

The desirability of making a statement concerning the international legal aspects of the case was urged on him, but for the time he refused it.

A strained calm prevailed in official circles.

Except what Secretary Bryan said, no statement concerning the Lusitania case was obtainable. The White house and executive departments were silent.

Nobody pretended, however, to have anything but the liner's destruction and its possible effect on this country on his mind.

Just how soon a cabinet would be called to consider the situation could not be learned. The president spent the forenoon on the golf links. Secretary Bryan cancelled a dinner engagement at Bryan's Point, near Mt. Vernon.

LOCAL WIRE TELLS OF WAR CONTRABAND

A commercial telegram which passed through La Crosse this morning carried the statement that the Lusitania's hold contained 8,700 barrels of ammonia, which is contraband.

U. S. PASSENGERS SHIELD FOR ARMS SAYS DERNBURG

Kaiser's Unofficial Spokesman Here Declares Lusitania Was British Man-of-War

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 8.—England carried American passengers on the Lusitania as a shield for carrying British munitions of war.

That charge was made in Cleveland today by Dr. Bernard Dernburg, unofficial spokesman for the Kaiser in the United States.

Dr. Dernburg made a vigorous denial that Germany is to blame for loss of life in the sinking of the great liner.

He branded the Lusitania as a British man-of-war and charged England advanced money at low interest to build her with a view of commanding her in time of war.

Don't Discuss War

Asked point blank whether he anticipated action by the United States which might result in pulling her into the war, because of the Lusitania's sinking, Dr. Dernburg said:

"That is a question I cannot discuss. I can only say that any ship flying the American flag, and not carrying contraband of war, is, and will be as safe as a cradle on the seas.

"But any other ship, not so exempt, is as unsafe as a volcano—or as was the Lusitania.

Dr. Dernburg dictated a statement, which he characterized as the most important statement he has yet issued in this country.

"Great Britain declared the North sea a war zone in the winter," he said. "No protest was made by the United States or any neutral. Great Britain held up all neutral ships carrying non-contraband goods. No foodstuffs of any kind have actually reached Germany since the war began. International law does not recognize any right to starve out a whole people.

"In retaliation Germany declared the waters around England a war zone, started a submarine warfare. It became known in February that British ships were flying the American flag as a protection.

English Refuse Mediation

"Great Britain replied by officially declaring its purpose to starve 120,000,000 Germans and Austrians. The United States very thoughtfully tried to mediate, proposing that foodstuffs should be passed, and submarine warfare be stopped.

"Germany agreed; England turned the proposition down.

"Vessels carrying contraband of war are liable to destruction unless they can be taken to a port of the country that captures them.

"Oil is contraband, like war ammunition and all materials. The master of the Gulfstream swore before customs officials to his cargo of oil for France.

"The master of the Lusitania similarly swore to his manifest of cargo of metals and ammunition. Both the Gulfstream and the Lusitania carried contraband when attacked, it is obvious.

Carried Contraband

"The Lusitania's manifest showed she carried for Liverpool 260,000 pounds of copper; 189 cases of military goods; 1,271 cases of ammunition; and for London 1,200 cases of cartridges.

"Vessels of that kind can be seized and destroyed under Hague rules without any respect to a war one. The Lusitania was a British auxiliary cruiser, a man-of-war. The passengers had had full warning, first by the German note in February, second by advertisements.

GERMANS PRAISE VON TIRPITZ FOR LUSITANIA AFFAIR

BERLIN, May 8.—Hundreds of telegrams of congratulations on the sinking of the Lusitania by a German submarine have been received by von Tirpitz, father of the submarine warfare. The newspapers praise the pluck and daring of the submarines which, they say, have avenged the loss of Admiral von Spee's squadron.

Some of the more violent anti-American newspapers hint that if American lives are lost Americans will be "only too glad to be compensated with cash."

MR. GARDNER IS ALL WORKED UP

Yells for War and Urges Wilson to Hold Germany to Strict Accountability for Loss of Life

SINGS PRAISE TO THE COLONEL

Representative Also Asserts That Our Fleet Could Not Hold Its Own with Kaiser's

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The White House retorted sharply this afternoon to expressions by Congressman Gardner, of "big navy" fame, concerning "strict accountability" in connection with the Lusitania disaster.

The statement was issued by Presidential Private Secretary Tumulty, in these words:

"I don't care to make any comment on Congressman Gardner's utterances except to say that the White House resents his action in using it as an auxiliary to his press bureau."

Gardner, after visiting the White House where he saw Tumulty, but not the president, said:

"I sincerely hope that the president will not recede one inch from his notice to Germany that he would hold her to 'strict accountability' if she blew up American citizens in her submarine warfare.

If the president recedes, Uncle Sam will become in the eyes of the world nothing better than a great international bluffer."

Asked how he interpreted the expression "strict accountability" he answered:

"You remember the answer President Lincoln sent to Lord Palmerston when it was reported a second Alabama was being fitted out, 'a second Alabama, your Lordship,' said Lincoln, 'means war.'"

"If Col. Roosevelt had been president," said Gardner, "Germany would have known what 'strict accountability' meant and disregarded the warning at her peril.

"Roosevelt might torpedo the constitution himself but he would not let anyone else torpedo anything American without knowing the reason why."

Considering his criticism of the navy, did he think, Gardner was asked, that it would be able to hold its own with the German fleet.

"Gosh, no," he replied, "but if Jesse Willard tweaked my nose, I'd have a try at him any way."

MRS. I. H. MOULTON

IS NOW AT REST;

FUNERAL SIMPLE

Rev. George R. Longbrake of Universalist Church

Reads Scripture Service and Prayer

With Rev. George R. Longbrake, pastor of St. Paul's Universalist church, officiating, and many friends in attendance, the last rites for Mrs. I. H. Moulton were conducted at 3 o'clock this afternoon from the Moulton residence, 235 South Sixth street.

Aside from the flowers which entirely covered the casket the services were marked by simplicity, following the custom of Mrs. I. H. Moulton throughout her life. Rev. Longbrake did not deliver a funeral sermon, conducting only a short service of scripture and prayer.

Friends viewed the body as it lay in state at the home prior to the services.

Pall bearers were A. P. Hankerson, E. L. Colman, W. F. Goodrich, R. J. Ray, Alfred Holbek and S. Y. Hyde, Jr.

Following the ceremony at the home, the body was escorted to Oak Grove cemetery, where the interment took place. A short service was held at the cemetery.

TOM MORRIS SUES
FIRM'S SECRETARY TO RECOVER STOCK

J. W. Hanks, Representing La Crosse Land and Investment Company, Defendant; Continued

The suit of Thomas Morris against J. W. Hanks, secretary of the La Crosse Land and Investment company to compel the secretary to transfer certain stock on the books of the company to the plaintiff was continued until May 23 in circuit court today.

Mr. Morris is the holder of a stock certificate of $2,000 in the company which was issued by the company as a credit in the purchase price of certain lands purchased by one Gib Neumann in Montana.

It is the contention of the plaintiff that largely through the exertions of Mr. Morris, the lands were sold at a profit of a dollar an acre before they were actually purchased by the company.

Owing to difficulties between certain incorporators the secretary refused to transfer the stock on the company's books. Mr. Morris therefore started action to commence such transfer.

was happening. For a few minutes we believed that the stories of the safety of the big liner would prove true and that she would stay afloat but the constantly increasing list showed that this hope was vain.

"Many of the passengers ran here and there about the decks, although Captain Turner and his officers tried their best to pacify them. Many of the women were hysterical and some of them, with infants in their arms, caught at the fastenings of the boats and hampered the launching. Altogether ten boats were finally swung over. Lady Mackworth was picked up unconscious after she had been in the water three hours. We had no warning and the big steamer sank within twelve or fifteen minutes after we were first hit.

"It was a dastardly outrage, deserving the condemnation of the entire civilized world.

Sea's Smoothness a Help

"It was a beautiful sunny day. The sea was smooth and to that is due the fact that anyone was saved. Had the water been rough or it had been night, everyone would have been lost.

"I doubt very much whether any of the port life boats were launched. They were in such position that they could not be swung over the sides. The steamer was headed for the short the moment the explosion occurred. Captain Turner stuck to the bridge to the last and was picked out of the water three hours after the Lusitania foundered."

Ernest Cooper, a newspaper man from Toronto, who was among the rescued, said:

"I am afraid that many of the boats could not be cut away in time. The vessel sank very fast and carried many people down with her. There naturally was some confusion, but I saw no real panic. There were many women and about forty children in the second cabin who were under one year old."

Wrapped in a blanket and without any clothing, Julian de Ayala, the Cuban consul at Liverpool, was most cheerful, although he had a great gash in his leg, from which the blood streamed.

Many Thought Boat Would Float

"I boarded three boats before I finally got on in safety," he said. "The only reason that I was saved was that I remained quiet and trusted in the Lord. I prayed that I might be spared for the sake of my three children who are in the convent in Liverpool. I believe there were many on board who made no effort to get into the boats, believing that the steamer could not sink."

The steamer Heron and two trawlers were assigned to gather up the dead. They returned to Queenstown at 6 o'clock this morning with more than 100 bodies, of which the majority were women. All are being taken to the temporary morgue in the town hall as fast as recovered and the admiralty has ordered that every effort be made to secure all victims.

The scenes on the quay here as the survivors arrived were pitiful in the extreme. Women wet and bedraggled, their faces lined with terror from the experience they had been through, were clinging to men, many of whom wore only shirts and trousers. Nearly all were without shoes. Little children clung to their parents and cried bitterly. Two little tots helped ashore an elderly lady who had been a long time in the water and collapsed on the pier.

Charles C. Hardwick of New York said:

"I entered boat 17 under orders, but it was overturned soon after striking the water. I then swam to boat 19 which had in it 18 women, 15 children and 30 men. Afterward this boat picked up four other men and one woman and finally was towed safely to shore."

Many Leap Overboard

Rescued sailors said that Captain Turner told the officers did everything possible to keep the passengers quiet but that the women rushed from boat to boat and interfered with their being launched. Many of the ten boats that were launched were nearly filled when they struck the water. More than 100 passengers attached life belts to their bodies and leaped into the water before the Lusitania disappeared. A great many of those were rescued by the Lusitania's own life boats.

Although reports were in circulation that Alfred G. Vanderbilt had been saved a search for him has failed to locate the slightest trace, and his friends here have about given up hope that he was rescued.

Finds Husband Dead

Mrs. L. B. Lines searched vainly for her husband all night after landing. Today she found him dead in a local hotel. He perished from exposure.

CARD OF THANKS.

We wish to extend our sincere thanks to all our friends for the kindness and sympathy shown us during our recent bereavement in the death of our mother and sister, Mrs. L. B. Soell. We also wish to thank all those who sent floral offerings.

Mrs. and Mrs. Otto Soell.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Simon and Family, Miss Laura Simon.

LATE 'CY' SNYDER BURIED WITH STAR AS CITY ALDERMAN

Now "Spike" Storandt Will Have to Serve Twelfth
Ward Without His Little
"Piece of Tin"

Because the late "Cy" Snyder, six years ago alderman of the Twelfth ward, was buried with his aldermanic insignia on his breast, C. F. Storandt, his present successor in the council and incidentally his business successor, will have to serve the city as alderman for the next two years without his "piece of tin."

Many of the aldermen are in the same predicament, but few of the gold stars purchased eight years ago being left. Aldermen are discussing taking an inventory of the badges and issuing duplicates for the missing ones. Even Mayor Bentley can't find his.

Alderman William Collins, the last alderman in the Twelfth ward, got along for two years and did good service for his constituents without the star. Alderman William Torrance of the Sixteenth ward has never seen the badge that goes with his office, he says. And so it is with many other of the aldermen, their stars are missing.

Act Not Covered by Law.

In a negro district a member was on trial, charged with stealing chickens. The evidence went to show that the defendant had been found with his foot in a steel trap at the door of the henry, while an empty sack lay near by. The decision of the judge was to this effect, "De co't finds dat de 'fend-ant hadn't no criminal 'entions. Dah haint no law to p'vent a gemmen frum puttin' his foot in a steel trap ef he wants ter do it."

WHO MAKES LAWS? 'WHY THE POLICE', SAYS FOREIGNER

Naturalization Day in Court Adds Fourteen Citizens to La Crosse Voting Population

Henry Harder, German, La Crosse county farmer didn't brush up on the questions that might be asked him when he became naturalized, and he had a hard time in circuit court today, when United States Naturalization Examiner Henry Bloch, St. Paul, and Circuit Judge E. C. Higbee put him through the "third degree" prior to his admittance to citizenship.

Harder didn't know exactly what the constitution of the United States was written for, but Bloch helped him through that. He struck an obstacle when the examiner asked him who made the laws in La Crosse.

"The police, I think," he said. Harder was admitted because he knew what the Fourth of July was celebrated for.

"Firecrackers," he said. While telegraph wires were busy today with the news of the disaster to the Lusitania, fifteen La Crosse county men were admitted to citizenship before Judge Brindley, and swore allegiance to the United States.

Those admitted to citizenship are: German — Michael Czarneski, Henry Harder, August Franz, Charles Bey and Charles Bartz.

Austrian — John Mertik, Joseph Jelmik, Joseph Zenker, Frank Smolek, Mathias Spah.

Swiss — Alois Frischle. Norwegian — Olaf Olsen Helmland and Paul Mattson.

Hollander — Seager Van der Loan. Swedish — Peter Erik Soderberg. Six were denied citizenship because of non-residence and other reasons.

SENIORS WIN TRACK MEET

Track honors this year go to the seniors at the high school, who this morning succeeded in netting 58 points against 28 of the juniors, 17 of the sophomores and 5 of the freshmen. Due to the wet weather poor showings were made in nearly all the events and the cold wind made the sprints slow as the men were stiff.

Stupka and Walter Regot tied for high honors. Each man had a total of two firsts and two seconds, amounting to 16 points.

The Bee in Literature.

The bee has had a place in literature ever since there was a literature. Bees are frequently mentioned in our Scriptures. Classic poets rhymed the honey of Hybla, in Sicily, that being of incomparable quality, and it is a fact that the queens of the Hybla bees have been extensively imported to this country to improve the American stock.

Love That Endures.

Men and women may not forget in marriage the law of human nature that that which is not expressed dies. And any love that is to endure and to grow must express itself in multiplied little ways. It is a serious matter that the repeated word of love and praise, the caress, the kiss, and the thoughtful attention should begin to fail.—Delineator.

DAILY WORD-COPY OF AN ART EXHIBIT PAINTING

Each day during the art exhibit The TRIBUNE will publish a word-copy of one of the paintings hung in the art exhibit. These sketches will be written by one made competent by experience and study, and will give a sense of the artist's meaning as well as facts of interest about the artist's personality and genius. Another of these daily sketches follows:

SOME COMPARISONS

Thomas Hovenden, whose "Breaking Home Ties" was perhaps the most popular picture at the Chicago world's fair, tells a story in his canvas, and usually a story with a sentimental streak in it. He really prefers prose to poetry. But we of the United States (especially was this true years ago; we seem growing away from it) were in the stage when we wished a story told. The present exhibit contains no canvas of this kind. Nor is there any which may be called sentimental, though many contain sentiment and much poetic feeling. And yet there is much difference in the way the several artists see and treat their material. Take for example Harthath's "October" (No. 9) and compare it in this respect with Peyrand's "Midsummer" (No. 18). While "October" is well done, the group of oaks being especially well painted, and all saying plainly, "A rich bit of autumn's harmonious coloring," yet one feels very definitely that this painter said to herself, "Here is what I see; it is a bit of nature; it is the truth; I will paint it for you." She respected her material, one feels, but did not reverence it. In her attitude towards her clump of oaks, she was too much like Peter Bell, to whom

"A primrose on the river's brim
A yellow primrose was to him,
And it was nothing more."

More of a painter than an artist, we feel. But when we turn to "Midsummer," we realize at once that this artist has a deeper insight into the beauty, the glory, the sublimity of nature than the Harthath canvas shows. Study the clumps of wind-blown trees in No. 18; see the feeling, the sentiment, the poetry. Note how grandly they stand there and resist the wind; how something about their treatment causes one's imagination to begin playing about them, to personify, to almost humanize them. They have dignity, strength, yet wonderful grace. They stand there veritable harps of the wind. The seeing eye is here too, for these are real trees, but there is idealization, which is only saying that the deeper meaning is seen and rendered by a cunning hand with witching sorcery and magnetic power, which draws us to worship while we admire.

As to composition, coloring, interest of subject, decorative effect—every pictorial element is present; indeed, it is a strong, well-conceived subject, painted with spirit and vigor.

BIG MEN BOLSTER MARKET AS SHIP'S LOSS THREATENS

Flood of Selling Orders
Starts Slump on 'Change
but Big Operators Absorb the Trouble

NEW YORK, May 8.—Despite a flood of selling orders from all parts of the United States there was a good undertone of support for today's stock market and it was plain that the big financial interests were standing squarely behind it. Although there was no minimizing the seriousness of the situation resulting from the sinking of the Lusitania it was felt the financial situation was such that all selling orders could be absorbed. This proved so. In the face of sales totaling 248,500 shares in the first hour, there was only a falling off in the first fifteen minutes, and even then the few figures of yesterday's panicky fifteen minutes were not touched.

Backed by the larger brokerage houses, shares were purchased until prices finally started up, and there were gains of 2 to 5 points in many stocks. It was flatly asserted that the buying demand would have been greater had it not been for the conservatism of the leading brokers, who demanded large margins before undertaking trades.

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN COUNCIL LETS BIDS AT FIRST MEETING

PRAIRIE DU CHIEN, Wis., May 8.—(Special.)—The first meeting of the new city council was held on Tuesday evening.

A. G. Kieser and Henry Whaley were re-elected to the positions of the Board of Education, and J. H. Peacock was elected member of the Library Board to succeed E. T. McCloskey as council representative.

L. Cornelius was re-elected on the latter board for three years. The old council before closing its year's work let the bid for paving Bluff street to a Watertown firm. The pavement will be of cedar blocks and will cost $20,488, extending from Main street to Illinois street.

Court May Eighteen. The county board of jury commissioners, James Fisher, Eastman; T. T. Sime, Gays Mills, and W. A. Vaughn, Wauzeka, met at the court house Wednesday to superintend the drawing of jurors for the spring term of circuit court, which convenes May 18th.

Members of the jury from Prairie du Chien will be J. W. Paris, George Aschbacher, Frank Cornelius, William Garry, George Huard and Ernest Dietrich. The third and last of a series of social meetings given this year by the Twentieth Century club, will be given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. N. Gunderson Wednesday evening, the hostess being Mesdames Gunderson, R. W. Fallis, P. L. Scanlan, J. S. Earl and Miss Stella Savage.

AUTOMOBILE THIEF NABBED IN ST. PAUL

Frank Gillies, St. Paul, who has been around La Crosse until the night of the robbery of the Justine garage, 219 North Third street, when the Ford automobile of E. H. Smale was stolen, was arrested at St. Paul yesterday on a John Doe warrant and a description furnished by the La Crosse police. He will be brought back to La Crosse tomorrow by Sheriff Ritter who will leave for St. Paul tonight. The police are confident it was Gillies who abandoned the Smale machine at Millston, Wis.

ONLY BADGER ON SHIP IS RESCUED

TWO TORPEDOES BLEW OUT LUSITANIA'S BOTTOM SAYS CANADIAN AMONG RESCUED

QUEENSTOWN, May 8.—One of the most connected and thrilling stories of the Lusitania tragedy was related here this afternoon by young Ellason Mayers of Stratford, Ont., who was enroute to join the British navy as a cadet.

"I had just gone to the upper deck with two friends for a game of 'Quits,'" he said, "when one of them looked over the side. He cried as he saw a streak: 'There's a torpedo coming right at us.' We watched until it struck then we rushed to the boat deck as a huge quantity of splinters and debris and masses of water fell around us. The second torpedo struck the liner just four minutes later and simply shattered the entire hull. The first torpedo was enough to have sunk the Lusitania but the second completed the task."

"Many of the women were panicked. I met one almost frenzied with fear and tried to calm her. I helped her into a boat. I then saw another boat that was nearly swamped. I got on board. Others followed me. We bailed for all we were worth. A crowd of men clambered in nearly swamping it again."

"Nobody had a knife but I found a hatchet and cut the boat clear. We were about 200 yards away when the Lusitania sank. The shrieks of the people as they were drawn down were appalling. We had to pull as hard as we could to get away and not be drawn under. We saved as many as we could, our boat being crowded to capacity. The ship simply sank like a stone at the finish, her entire bottom being literally torn out by the various explosions. The scene at the end was terrifying. Although many of the passengers had adjusted their life belts, they were drawn down like stones by the terrible suction of so large a steamer. Mothers with their babies still clamped in their arms in death unable to get on board the boats in time, and they drowned when drawn under the surface by the under-drag of the vessel."

"It all occurred so rapidly that I hardly realized just what had happened," said Clinton Bernard of New York. "When I saw that we were sinking I jumped overboard without stopping to adjust a life belt. I picked up a piece of floating wreckage and clung to it. Finally a life boat came along floating bottom side up. I clung to it for a time and finally others came along side and we managed to right it and climbed in. We rescued as many as we could reach. I saw the submarine just before it dived for the last time. It made no attempt to save anyone."

MOST LUXURIOUS LINER ON SEAS

Holds Record for Round-trip Passage from New York to Liverpool; Built in 1907

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Lusitania at the present time is the most luxurious liner in the trans-Atlantic service. The Hamburg-American giant Vaterland is tied up at her pier in Hoboken on account of the war. The Lusitania holds the record for the speediest round trip passage from New York to Liverpool and return. She covered that route in 11 days, 23 hours and 45 minutes, during the first few months of her career.

The Lusitania is a steel, quadruple screw, turbine engine vessel of 30,396 net tons, built by J. Brown & Co., of Glasgow, in 1907. Her length is 762.2 feet, her beam 78.8 feet and main draft 56.5 feet. Her officers are:

Captain, W. T. Turner, R. N. S. Staff captain, J. A. Anderson.

Chief officer, J. T. McKubbin. A month ago the Lusitania, outward bound from Liverpool, raised the Stars and Stripes in place of the British Union Jack, as protection against a submarine attack. Her commander explained this ruse on the strength that his duties were to safeguard his passengers. This incident brought about a "friendly note" addressed to the British government by the United States and a further friendly request of the German government asking what precautions would be taken by the commanders of German submarines to ascertain the nationality of vessels they attacked.

Germany did not formally answer this note. Great Britain did, responding, in effect, that she reserved the right to use the flag of any nation to protect lives and property aboard her ships.

GARRISON ABANDONS TRIP

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Owing to the Lusitania disaster, Secretary of War Garrison today abandoned the trip on which he was to have left tonight to inspect Tennessee and Alabama river and harbor improvement works. He said nobody suggested to him that the trip be given up but he did not want to be away when such "interesting" things were happening.

NEW YORK, May 8.—American line officials this afternoon scouted a rumor which they admitted was in circulation locally that the steamer New York, of their line, due in Liverpool tomorrow, had been torpedoed. The line officials declared they had absolutely no word from their London office and were not worried by the rumor which they attributed to nervousness incidental to the Lusitania disaster.

The Philadelphia, of the American line passed out of the narrows shortly after noon.

Have an Arctic Bunk?

A "bunk" house is an Arctic hotel made of logs, with moss cushions, a dirt roof and a dirt floor. A great sheet iron stove keeps it warm. Two rows of bunks, covered with grass or brush, extend along the walls. The old-fashioned string and latch hold the whip-sawed door closed and there is a place to cook the meals. To stay over night costs a dollar.

TAFT PRAISES 'U'

AS ONE OF BEST IN UNITED STATES

Intimation His Motives in Walsh Pardon Might Be Misconstrued Prompts Explanation

MADISON, Wis., May 8.—(Special.)—Concluding a series of university lectures on the national president's here yesterday afternoon, William H. Taft voiced his gratification for the welcome accorded him in Madison, and his estimate of the University of Wisconsin as one of the greatest universities in the country. He said he would cherish his three days' visit as one of his pleasantest memories.

His life during the last two years has been added to very greatly," he said. "In my contact with the great universities of the country—and you in Wisconsin surely have one of the greatest."

In presenting the former president to the vast audience, President Van Hise spoke of his broad Americanism, which enabled him to look upon the presidency in its larger aspects with level eyes, and remarked upon the absence of "stilted self-sufficiency" in the ex-president.

Mr. Taft was entertained at a dinner given by the law school last night and left this morning for Milwaukee for an afternoon's round of speech-making and entertainment.

Mr. Taft spoke at length yesterday afternoon on the pardoning power of the president. Many in the audience caught a reference to his action in freeing Banker Walsh from Atlanta penitentiary when he referred to a specific case where he had used his power. He said it had been widely intimated that he may have been deceived with regard to one man whom he had pardoned ostensibly for the sake of the man's health but who is today in better health than ever. Mr. Taft said he has studied the question of power of a president to revoke pardons granted through possible deceit in presenting the arguments for clemency. He

NAVAL PATROLS SEARCH SEA FOR BODIES OF LOST

DENIED VESSEL WAS ARMED

Steward Who Survives Says Four Torpedoes Were Launched and Two Missed

LIVERPOOL, May 8.—The magnitude of the Lusitania tragedy has staggered Liverpool, her home port. It is now certain that nearly three-fourths of the passengers and crew have lost their lives. Many of the survivors are still very seriously ill from their experiences or injured by the explosion and may die.

The loss of life among the first cabin passengers was very heavy. Of the survivors landed at Queens-town, 22 died during the night.

Naval patrols are still searching the seas but their work now is the sorrowful task of trying to gather the bodies of the victims. Admiral Coke, of the Queenstown naval station, has gathered all of the boats that were available. Their commanders have been ordered to watch for submarines, as it is feared the craft which destroyed the Lusitania still is in the vicinity.

The revised list of the passengers, with their nationality as issued by the Cunard company, was as follows:

First Cabin
Great Britain	179
United States	106
Greece	3
Sweden	1
Switzerland	1
Sweden	1

Second Cabin

Deny Ship Was Armed

Denial was made that the Lusitania was armed. It was said that early in the war it had been proposed to mount deck guns but that an intimation that the United States government was unfavorable to such a plan caused it to be dropped.

The first story of the tragedy to reach Queenstown was brought by the survivors who were landed at midnight. There were 159 of them, and the steward in charge said:

"The passengers were at lunch when the liner was torpedoed. From the best that I could find out four torpedoes were launched and two struck and exploded. One of these demolished the engine room. The vessel had already begun to list when Captain Turner ordered the boats manned and out. The list was so bad that only about ten boats were gotten safely into the water. Roughly speaking they carried about 500. The boats tried to keep together as they proceeded toward land. Many of those that we had on board were suffering from shock and most of our women had to be sent to hospitals. We did not see the submarine after the vessel was struck."

Admiral Denies Arms
LONDON, May 8.—The admiralty issued an official denial that the Lusitania was armed.

Great Minds Had Same Thought.
"He giveth his beloved sleep," is an ancient saying which is merely another expression of the thought that he who lives a pure and upright life will sleep as a lovely and healthful babe sleeps. The mentally feverish Lord Byron, sleepless and distraught, wrote: "God bless the man who first invented sleep." So said Sancho Panza and so say I." Thus giving a new immortality to the immortal creation of Cervantes, Spain's greatest writer.

Italy harvests about 22,000 acres of tomatoes yearly, and the wastage amounts to practically nothing. The skins and seeds, formerly discarded, are now utilized, the former as stock feed and the latter as a source of oil. The crude oil is suitable for soap-making and for lamps, and the refined product is said to be edible.

greatly doubted whether such power exists.

Referring again to a subject touched upon in his address to the legislature this week, Mr. Taft expressed the hope that congress, or the senatorial branch thereof, shall some day establish an arbitral court before which international disputes may be settled and war made less possible. He differed with the senate upon this matter. The upper house was jealous of the prerogatives of that body in delegating powers to a board which it considered belonged to its own particular province.

LAW IS PROPOSED TO ALLOW WOMEN TO WORK NIGHTS

Stern Opposition from Retail Clerks and Women's Bodies Against Bill for Ten Hours Work

MADISON, Wis., May 8.—Several bills of vital importance to men and women workers of Wisconsin will receive the attention of legislative committees on Tuesday and Wednesday, May 11 and 12. One of the bills, 463S, seeks to extend the hours for night labor of women in stores and other places of employment. This bill, if passed, will make it possible for department stores and other establishments to keep open until 9 o'clock at night for thirty additional days in the year. Night work is now permitted one day a week or fifty-two times a year.

The bill was introduced at the instance of concerns which desire to keep open evenings during the Christmas holiday season, and the period of inventory immediately thereafter. Under the existing law, if women are required to work after 8, their daily hours of labor must not aggregate more than eight hours. The new bill changes the law so that saleswomen may be required to work 10 hours a day up to 9 for thirty days each year; they could also be required to work ten hours for one day in each week with the limit of 55 hours a week. The bill is expected to receive stern opposition from the Wisconsin Consumers' league and the Milwaukee Retail Clerks' association. Department stores which in the past have opposed night work during the holiday rush also are expected to line up against the bill.

Woman Swimmer In Water Hour Before Her Rescue

Tries Vainly to Save Her Husband When Ship is Shattered by Explosion While at Coffee in Saloon

QUEENSTOWN, May 8.—Mrs. M. N. Pappadopoulos, of Athens, Greece, faced death in the sea for more than an hour. An expert swimmer, she was totally exhausted when landed here. On the rescue tug she had been given a sailor's sweater and trousers to replace her wet clothing. Her husband, whom she tried vainly to save, probably was lost.

"I was ordering coffee in the saloon," she said. "When the ship was almost broken in two by the force of an explosion, I put on a life belt and so did my husband. I tried to help him after we got into the water. He was no swimmer, however, and I fear that he was lost. Only the thought of my babies in Athens buoyed me up until finally I was picked up by a fishing boat."

Mrs. Pappadopoulos will live, the doctors say.

Eyes of Fishes.
The eyes of fishes are in constant use except when they are asleep. Most fishes have no eyelids, their eyes being protected from injury by a shiny material or by a thick transparent skin. The puffer, or swellfish, which habitually burrows in sand at the bottom of the water, has eyelids which cover the eyeballs when closed, the lower eyelid being larger than the upper.

BRADISH TO HOLD ENGINEERING JOB FOR REST OF YEAR

Mayor Bentley Gets Council's Permission to Re-serve Appointment Until Later

TO NAME MAN IN NOVEMBER

Council Committees Hear Arguments of High School and Postpone Other Matters

George P. Bradish will continue to be city engineer until the second Friday in November, at least. Then he is eligible to reappointment by Mayor Bentley.

Chief of the Fire Department Nathan Bradfield today is possessed of a new Overland roadster, purchased at a cost of $850.

The La Crosse Bridge company has been ordered paid $600 which has been owing the company by the city for a number of years for repairs made to a bridge on the La Crescent turnpike.

Police Sergeant John Wendling has $446.77 coming to him from the city which the aldermen will order paid to him at the next meeting. This is the difference between his salary and what he actually earned while he was off the force through an erroneous act on the part of the Police and Fire commission.

—Council Committee Results.

City council committees with Mayor A. A. Bentley threshed out important matters left over from the last council in the first joint committee session last night and will hold another special session on Wednesday night to take up unfinished business, which will include the free bridge, river terminals, building inspection and traffic zone ordinance and continuance of the arguments for a North side high school.

Mayor Bentley in a special session of five minutes obtained the permission of the aldermen to withhold his appointment of a city engineer until the November meeting of the council. He said he was a new man in the council and was insufficiently familiar with the qualifications of Mr. Bradish or the qualifications of other applicants to make a selection that would be for the good of the city. During the next six months he said he would familiarize himself with the engineer's duties and the appointee would be one whose worth to the city of La Crosse had been demonstrated.

Put Bonds on Counter

Members of the Board of Education appeared before the committee to urge the needs this year of a new high school in North La Crosse and Alderman Mahoney proposed an ordinance providing that instead of issuing a 20 year bond for the $50,000 cost of the structure, the city pay for it in five issues of $10,000 each expiring each year for five years, the bonds to be divided into certificates of $100 each which could be "placed on the counter" and sold to local investors.

Incidentally Alderman Mahoney took occasion to throw a few slams at the free bridge project which is before the council following the people's indorsement at the polls last month. He said the election over the bridge question was a "joke."

He accused the merchants, manufacturers and business men who were back of the free bridge movement of showing only their side of the topic and inferred the true situation had been concealed from the voters.

"If the real situation were shown," said the North side alderman, "the proposition would have been overwhelmingly lost—by a vote of 10,000."

Housing Problem Serious

President Luening of the Board of Education declared the problem of housing the high school students was becoming more serious with each semester and that a North side high school has been in contemplation for a number of years. He said the board had consulted with Architect Llewellyn, the designer of the South high school on the possibility of adding another story to the structure but the members had been advised that the walls were not heavy enough to support another floor.

Miss Heidemann is Busy

Superintendent Benezet declared there are but 908 seats in the new high school with 940 pupils, which keeps them constantly shifting from one seat to another, making it necessary for Miss Heidemann, assistant principal, to spend a large part of her time "counting noses" to see that the pupils do not "play hooky."

Principal Hayden of the Logan school was an earnest advocate of the immediate needs of the North side for a school house and other speaker included Alderman Grover, Alderman Smith and Alderman Torrance who declared the school should not be built for a year or more, it was finally decided to resume the arguments Wednesday night.

Wendling is Paid Up

Police Sergeant John Wendling, who for a period of about six months was disbarred from service by an erroneous act of the Police and fire commission was voted his back salary without dissent. The committee will recommend to the council that Wendling be paid $446.77, which is the difference between his actual earnings during the time he was off the force and his running salary.

The committee finally ordered paid the long standing account of the La Crosse Bridge company against the city for work done on the La Crescent road bridge several years ago.

DOLLAR GOES FAR WHEN BIG BARGAINS ARE ANNOUNCED

History tells us that George Washington once threw a silver dollar across the Potomac river. That is making a dollar go a long way, but it becomes an ordinary "three-a-day" trick when compared to the stunts a silver dollar will do on Dollar Day.

It doesn't necessarily have to be a silver dollar, either. A paper dollar, two halves, four quarters or a hundred pennies will do the same thing, and more. Dollar Day is a happy day for the economical buyer, and happy surprises are in store.

The next Dollar Day will be held Wednesday, May 19. The papers of Monday, May 17, will contain the Dollar Day announcements of the merchants.

And They Are Never Popular.

"Some men," said Uncle Eben, "has such a superior way dat dey kin make you feel as if you didn't have no right to know nuffin' till dey took de trouble to come around an' tell it to you."

ENRICH THE BLOOD

Hood's Sarsaparilla, a Spring Tonic-Medicine, is Necessary

Everybody is troubled at this season with loss of vitality, failure of appetite, that tired feeling, or with bilious turns, dull headaches, indigestion and other stomach troubles, or with pimples and other eruptions on the face and body. The reason is that the blood is impure and impoverished.

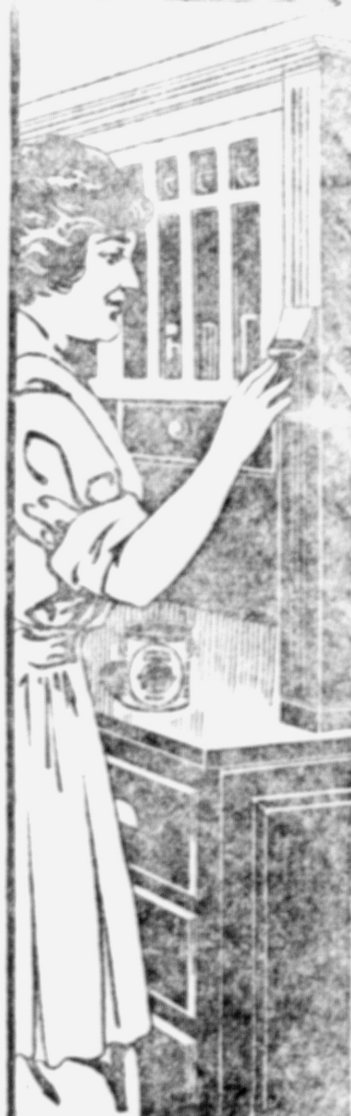

Hood's Sarsaparilla relieves all these ailments. It is the old reliable medicine that has stood the test of forty years—that makes pure, rich, red blood—that strengthens every organ and builds up the whole system. It is the all-the-year-round blood-purifier and health-giver. Nothing else acts like it, for nothing else is like it. There is no real substitute: so be sure to get Hood's. Ask your druggist for it today, and begin taking it at once.

TYPHUS TAKES TOLL IN SERBIA; DEAD REMOVED BY WAGON LOADS

Wagon loads of typhus victims.

Typhus is making horrible ravages among the soldiers and civilian population of Serbia. The death rate is frightful and ox-carts loaded with four or five coffins apiece form a continuous funeral procession through the somber streets leading to the burial ground.

Enamels are Easy to Apply

Have you a certain room in your house that looks just a bit dingy, or an old dresser or chair or table that would look more cheerful and inviting if it were given a dainty new finish of genuine enamel?

There are dozens of home painting jobs that you can do with little time or expense by using

ACME QUALITY

ENAMELS

Enamels cost but little more than ordinary paints and are easy to apply. They form smooth, hard surfaces that can be cleaned with a damp cloth almost as easily as porcelain.

WOLF IS JAILED ON ARSON CHARGE AT PRESTON, MINN.

Man Who Registered at La Crosse Hotel on Night of Fire Said to Have Walked 27 Miles

ATE BREAKFAST AT WINONA

Hadn't Occupied Bed Here Nor Even Seen Room Says Fire Marshal Murray

As a result of an investigation here yesterday by M. J. Murray, deputy state fire marshal of Minnesota, co-operation by La Crosse police and the sheriff at Spring Valley, Frank Wolf of that place whose barn and mill were burned April 22, is now in jail at Preston, where he will await the action of the next grand jury, May 25.

Wolf is charged with arson in the third degree, punishable with seven years' imprisonment. It is the contention of the fire marshal that he set fire to his barn by pouring kerosene into some slow burning material and leaving it to smoulder.

Wolf, it is alleged, first came to La Crosse and engaged a room and paid for his breakfast at the La Crosse hotel. He then took the afternoon train back to a station within seven miles of his home, walked the seven miles, and the fire marshal says, started the fire. Then, the contention is, the man walked 20 miles more across country, caught another train and registered at a Winona hotel, where he ate breakfast.

"We found that he hadn't even seen his room here, much less occupied his bed," said the fire marshal. "When we asked him if he went up on the elevator to his room the night he claims to have been in La Crosse, he said 'yes.' He didn't even know there isn't an elevator in the La Crosse hotel. His bed hadn't been disturbed that night."

YEOMEN TO TAKE IN CLASS

The Brotherhood of American Yeomen held its regular meeting in Linker hall Tuesday evening. Twenty-five applications were presented for the large class to be known as the Mayor Bentley class, and including city and county officials, and many business people to be taken in, Thursday, May 26, the night set aside for the ladies in Yeomanry.

The ladies' degree team will put on the full degree work, illustrated with stereopticon slides, and including a fancy drill by the juvenile drill team.

Tuesday afternoon the members of Rowena circle, B. A. Y., entertained their friends at cards. Prizes were awarded to Mesdames Rossberg, Wagner, Lee, Knothe, Horn and Welch. The circle will hold its regular meeting in Linker hall next Tuesday afternoon.

SUGGEST RAISING SHIP

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Navy department officials suggested today the raising of the Lusitania as a means of determining the character of the explosion which sunk the craft, and incidentally of recovering valuables. They said charts showed the water's depth 19 miles off Kin-said not exceeding 120 to 200 feet and said salvaging operations would not be difficult.

GERMAN WAR FILMS

The first and only official motion pictures, the German phases of the current great war, are announced for exhibition at the La Crosse Theater for three performance commencing tonight. "German war pictures for Germans" is the manner of the announcements heralding the views. The pictures are stated to have the approval of the Kaiser, who, with his war staff and family, appears in several of the scenes captured by the camera. "The German Side of the War in Europe," is the complete title of the new film feature.

"THE NEW HENRIETTA"
Five distinguished stars are appearing in "The New Henrietta," scheduled for presentation at the La Crosse Theater for one performance, Tuesday evening, May 11th, for the reason that the roles which they interpret are of such equal importance in the unfolding of the plot, that indifferent acting would assuredly prove the play's undoing.

"The New Henrietta" is one of the most brilliant comedies that has ever been shown on the American stage, and in the hands of the present organization it has earned new laurels in New York and Chicago.

MISS BILLIE BURKE

Miss Billie Burke in "Jerry" will be the attraction at the La Crosse Theater Wednesday, May 12. Miss Burke herself would be a welcome visitor and people who have seen "Jerry" say it is a most amusing comedy. Catherine Chisholm Cushing wrote it. The heroine is a young girl from Chicago who falls desper-

War Office News of Fighting

PARIS

PARIS, May 8.—The British have carried a part of the line of trenches previously lost to the Germans at the point of the bayonet. The Germans have lost very heavily, according to the war office. The British have now regained part of their original position at Hill 60, southeast of Ypres.

Before marriage most women worry because they are single, and after marriage they worry because they are not.

1,502 LIVES LOST ON LUSITANIA WHEN GIANT BRITISH LINER GOES DOWN AFTER BEING STRUCK BY GERMAN TORPEDO; MANY OF DEAD AMERICANS

Many Of American Passengers Are Among The Known Dead, Probably Including Alfred G. Vanderbilt---Only A Few Of The Cabin Passengers Were Saved According To Reports From Queenstown Where Survivors Are Landing---
Over 100 Of Those Picked Up Die After Rescue

QUEENSTOWN, May 8.—An official statement from the admiralty here early today said that all the rescue boats except the Heron had returned, landing 658 living and 45 dead from the sunken Lusitania at Kinsale. Fishing boats may have saved a few more, it was stated.

Later the Heron and two trawlers signalled, saying they are bringing in 100 more bodies.

The total number of persons aboard the Lusitania was officially announced as 2,160.

Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt, multi-millionaire of New York, is believed to have perished in the torpedoing of the Lusitania. A cabin steward reported on reaching here that he saw Vanderbilt going down and he did not know whether he was rescued later or not.

Many American passengers are among the known dead or missing, according to reports received here today. Only a few cabin passengers are saved, it is believed.

Nearly all officers of the Lusitania, except Captain Turner, are now reported to have perished. Of 400 survivors landed during the night, 22 have perished from exposure or from the shock.

Hit by Two Torpedoes.

The Lusitania's passengers were at lunch when two torpedoes struck, according to word reaching here early today. They rushed to the deck and noticed a heavy list. Those who ran to the port side had small chance of escape. All the survivors were in pitiful condition.

Best information available places the number of passengers who died while being brought ashore at 100.

Lady Mack Worth failed to reach a life boat and went down with the Lusitania, according to stories told by survivors today. She was picked up in the water and rescued.

The Lusitania sank in about twelve or fifteen minutes when she was only about fifteen miles off the coast, according to D. A. Thomas, colliery owner and one of the survivors brought here. Thomas said the liner was torpedoed without warning.

Thomas said Lady Mackworth was unconscious when picked up. She had been in the water for three and one-half hours.

Frohman Perishes.

Later reports received here said that Alfred G. Vanderbilt probably was saved, but that Charles Frohman perished. Vanderbilt reached a life boat, according to several survivors. He has not reached here but it is thought possible the boat unloaded at Kinsale.

There were 188 American passengers aboard the Lusitania, according to an official statement from the Cunard line.

At least 1,500 lives were lost according to best information available here at 10:30 today.

At this hour only 658 survivors have been brought here alive, though a patrol boat is reported to have picked up 52 others and it is assumed that other lifeboats unloaded at other spots along the coast.

Twenty-two of those brought here during the night have since perished from exposure and the shock of the disaster. In addition to those known dead, 45 bodies were put ashore here during the night. Three vessels now approaching the Queenstown harbor signalled that they are carrying 100 more bodies.

Most of the survivors are in a pitiful condition. All agree that the liner was torpedoed without warning while approximately fifteen miles off the coast and that she sank in less than twenty minutes.

NEW YORK, May 8.—At 8 o'clock last night there were about 200 persons gathered in the offices of the Cunard line waiting for definite word of the fate of the Lusitania's passengers. During the afternoon, 1,800 telegrams were received asking for information while long distance telephone messages kept the officials of the line busy. From as far west as Chicago, as far south as Atlanta and as far north as Montreal the inquiries came. To all the same answer was made that the line hoped that all have been saved but had no definite information.

The Lusitania carried 98 sacks of American mail which the Cunard line took over as a favor to the postoffice department which had been unable to get it on an American liner. She also had a very heavy miscellaneous cargo.

SLAYS DROP BOMBS ON PORTE

PARIS, May 7.—An Athens dispatch to Matin says that the Russian aviators are displaying great activity. Three are reported to have flown over the suburbs of Constantinople on Thursday and dropped bombs.

MOST OF MINES ON DUTCH COAST BRITISH

THE HAGUE, May 7.—It was officially announced today that the Dutch mine sweepers who have been gathering mines on the coast since the opening of the war, have recovered 291 of English construction, 54 of French, 32 of German and 146 whose identity could not be established.

DR. CARMEN ON STAND

MINNEAPOLIS, May 7.—In a clear voice, without a trace of embarrassment, Dr. Edwin Carman today took the witness stand in his wife's trial for murder and told how Mrs. Louise Bailey was shot to death in his office. Dr. Carman was the first important witness of the day, three minor ones having preceded him. The defense suddenly changed its plans to start their case by calling the beautiful defendant.

HURT IN RUNAWAY

RHINELANDER, Wis., May 7.—Gaylord Hatfield, of Pembine, sustained a fractured skull, his wife two broken ribs, and Miss Annabelle Anderson a dislocated shoulder when Hatfield's team ran away near here and overturned the buggy. Two of Hatfield's children were uninjured. Hatfield will die.

DARNELL CASE TO BE TRIED MONDAY

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 7.—The case of James M. Darnell, charged with white slavery, will come to trial next Monday.

Darnell is charged with having taken Ruth Soper from Minnesota to Wisconsin for immoral purposes. Both claim they were married in Hammond, Ind., although government officials have been unable to find any record of the ceremony. It is pointed out that if Darnell and the girl succeeded in proving their marriage the case may be thrown out of court.

The trial, which was originally set for Tuesday, has been brought forward one day.

BRYAN TAKES PASSIVE POSITION

Intimation That U. S. Re-

Progress Not Taken as Militant Suggestion

WASHINGTON, May 7.—Diplomats and others who are familiar with far eastern conditions were on the lookout here today for three distinct new developments in the Japanese-Chinese situation. These were revolutionary activity in China, an unofficial Chinese boycott of everything Japanese, and manifestations of disapproval by the Japanese masses of a governmental war policy.

It was pointed out that Yuan Shai Kai became president of China practically by force, that he is bitterly hated by the republican element, that there has been hardly a time throughout his entire regime that some part of the country has not been in arms against him and that the moment seems opportune for his enemies to join forces against him, on the ground that he has "sold out" to Japan, of which he has been openly accused.

The boycott, it was recalled, has long been a most effective Chinese weapon. An instance was cited of but a few years ago, when the Japanese were suspected of aggressive designs, the ban against their goods was so rigidly observed that the utmost tact had to be shown in reassuring the people to save Japan's Chinese trade from complete ruin.

That the rank and file of the Japanese strongly oppose war, it was asserted, recent demonstrations against increased armament expenditures showed conclusively.

Secretary Bryan Thursday night issued a statement at President Wilson's instance.

This statement indicated no new administration policy and such diplomats as would talk at all said they were convinced the government's attitude will remain passive toward any oriental development which does not actually endanger American lives and property.

One section of the statement, did, indeed, refer to "no abatement" in the United States' "interest in the welfare and progress of China," but there was no suggestion that this interest would be permitted to become militantly active.

Speaking unofficially, men in touch with the administration said there was no thought of surrendering any American treaty rights in China, but that this could not be construed to mean an armed intervention in the situation.

NO EFFECT ON U. S. POLICY DECLARES CHAIRMAN STONE OF FOREIGN RELATIONS COM.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—"The sinking of the Lusitania," said Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee, in an interview here last night, "is indeed an unfortunate affair, but how does it affect the administration's present attitude?"

"The Germans have a right to sink or do whatever they please with British ships and the British have identically the same right with respect to those of Germany."

The same obtains whether it be a vessel of war or a liner—they are in either case, ships of a belligerent.

"Of course, the Lusitania is the largest ship thus far to be involved but the principle remains the same."

"In a submarine attack on the enemy's ship, be it war vessel or a liner, the attacker has no way of knowing whether or not there are neutrals on board. There may be neutrals on a battleship."

Late advices, indicating loss of life on the Lusitania, produced no visible effect on officials in Washington last night.

Only the usual night watchers were on duty at the White house and departments. The German and British embassies reported the receipt of no news except what came through unofficial sources.

A cabinet meeting was expected today to consider the situation but this was only guess work—there was no announcement.

The Washington Times continued to discuss the possibilities of an extra congressional session.

"No surprise would be caused," it said in a late extra, "if the president should issue a call in the next twenty-four hours."

"The shadow of war with Germany looms on the horizon."

So far as appeared, however, these were the Times' own individual views. There was no official comment to bear them out.

MOST LUXURIOUS LINER ON SEAS

Holds Record for Round-trip Passage from New York to Liverpool;
Built in 1907

NEW YORK, May 8.—The Lusitania at the present time is the most luxurious liner in the trans-Atlantic service. The Hamburg-American giant Vaterland is tied up at her pier in Hoboken on account of the war.

The Lusitania holds the record for the speediest round trip passage from New York to Liverpool and return. She covered that route in 11 days, 23 hours and 45 minutes, during the first few months of her career.

The Lusitania is a steel, quadruple screw, turbine engine vessel of 30,396 net tons, built by J. Brown & Co., of Glasgow, in 1907. Her length is 762.2 feet, her beam 87.8 feet and main draft 56.5 feet. Her officers are:

Captain, W. T. Turner, R. N. S.
Staff captain, J. A. Anderson.
Chief officer, J. T. McKubbin.

A month ago the Lusitania, outward bound from Liverpool, raised the Stars and Stripes in place of the British Union Jack, as protection against a submarine attack. Her commander explained this ruse on the strength that his duties were to safeguard his passengers. This incident brought about a "friendly note" addressed to the British government by the United States and a further friendly request of the German government asking what precautions would be taken by the commanders of German submarines to ascertain the nationality of vessels they attacked.

Germany did not formally answer this note. Great Britain did, responding, in effect, that she reserved the right to use the flag of any nation to protect lives and property aboard her ships.

U. S. CONSUL LOOKING UP AMERICAN DEAD

WASHINGTON, May 8.—From Wesley Frost, American consul at Cork, Ireland, the state department received last night a message asking if the names were desired of Americans among the Lusitania's survivors. Reply was sent immediately asking for the names of the dead instead.

"Probably many survivors. Rescue work progressing favorably," said Frost's message.

PASSENGERS NOT SCARED

NEW YORK, May 8.—Only twelve passengers on the Anchor liner Transylvania (British) cancelled their passages when the vessel sailed late yesterday afternoon for Glasgow via Liverpool.

WILLIAM SEPTER LEAVES NORTH SIDE

With the removal of William Septer and family to Rochester, the north side loses one of its widest known and best liked storekeepers. Mr. and Mrs. Septer have for several years kept little stands where people for a radius of many blocks went for their necessities. They formerly had a store at 902 Avon street, moving last summer to 1722 George street. Their late location will be occupied by a grocery business.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., May 6.—Benjamin Matzek, 36, senior member of Matzek & Pieper, patternmakers, was instantly killed and two others were injured when Matzek's automobile ran into a ditch near Waukesha last night and was overturned.

BADGER ON SHIP

KENOSHA, Wis., May 7.—Thomas B. Jeffery, president of the Jeffery Automobile company, was a passenger on the Lusitania.

WHY NOT "SAFETY FIRST?"

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla., May 7.—If Della Harris, vaudeville actress, had only followed the ancient custom of depositing her loose change in the little thread bank, with the elastic combination, she might be better off than she now is. Instead she put only $20 therein, and deposited the rest of her salary in a suitcase. The suitcase was "frisked" and later a man was arrested.

Short Story

MRS. WADHAM'S CURE

BY WILL STRONG

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.

The sea flashed in the sunlight and Mrs. James Wadham blinked her eyes and turned them toward the cooling green of the golf links. Her glance sharpened as she recognized her husband's portly form.

His face flamed with the heat and his white clothes looked limp. Over one shoulder a bag of clubs sagged heavily.

"I wonder who that man is—he looks like the one who arrived this morning; I wonder if Edith— Her thoughts became chaotic as her husband came up the steps and sank into a chair beside her.

"Blistering hot, Meg," he puffed, mopping his brow.
 "Who is that man, Jim?" she asked.
 "What man?" he stared.
 "The one you crossed the links with—the tall man with fair hair."
 "Oh—that's Denway."
 "One of the Denways?" she demanded, wide eyed.
 He nodded carelessly.
 "One of the Denway twins, I believe."

 "Which one?"
 "Search me! I didn't ask him. Seems to me I heard someone call him Cecil."

"Cecil Denway?" Meg Wadham grew pink with excitement. Her black eyes flashed.
 Her husband recognized the signs and smiled inwardly.
 "They've got all kinds of money," he egged her on.
 "I know it—Jim, I've been thinking of Edith—you know she is too good for the best man on earth!"

"Right—for that reason she'll probably marry some good-for-nothing scamp who will expect me to support them both. I'm so sure of it that I'm setting aside a certain sum of money for the purpose."
 "Jim—you are too absurd. Fancy a Denway expecting you to support him!"

"A Denway—hey? Say, Meg, how long has Edith been acquainted with Reggie Denway?"
 "I thought you said it was Cecil," she countered.
 "Well—Cecil—Reginald—any old name that suits you. How long has she known any of the Denways?"
 "Not at all—she has never met them."
 "Then why worry about my supporting him? I think women are the most eccentric creatures on this foot-stool!" James Wadham beckoned to a hotel servant, and was presently served with two tall, cool glasses of orange juice. One of these he pushed across the table toward his wife.

He buried his aggressive nose in the other.

"Of course, James," said Mrs. Wadham impudently, "you will arrange for Edith to meet Mr. Denway—it's a chance in a lifetime. Cecil Denway is one of the richest men in the world and above the ordinary in character. The other Denway twin, Reggie, is married; he married one of the Evans girls—Beulah Evans married Count Ignace Spattico."

Mrs. Wadham rattled off these names with great complacency. She knew her social blue book from cover to cover. Although not of the social set whose doings she watched from afar and envied, her husband's millions often brought his wife and daughter in touch with the charmed circle.

Mrs. Wadham's one object in life was to marry her daughter to some one within the magic circle. Edith's indifference to the project and her husband's open amusement at her repeated failures nettled her into greater action.

"Edith shall marry this Denway," she said between her clenched teeth, and she fell into a brown study, planning, scheming, plotting to bring about the desired end.

With Edith married to Cecil Denway she would be a relative by marriage to the Countess Spattico, a triumph indeed over the old acquaintances who looked askance upon Meg Wadham's social ambitions.

Her husband's voice broke in on her thoughts.

"I recognized Dick Ainslee at once and asked him what he was doing down here. Said he was private secretary to Denham."

Mrs. Wadham shrugged impatiently. "It does seem as though Dick Ainslee was always appearing in the most unexpected places. It will be very disagreeable for him, when Edith marries Mr. Denway, to occupy a menial position in her household."

James Wadham grinned broadly. He did not tell his wife that when he had recognized Dick Ainslee on the beach a few hours ago Edith had been with him. The memory of Edith's face as she looked at Dick sealed her father's lips. But he could not help saying with a little sigh:

"Money isn't everything, my dear. We used to be mighty happy before I struck oil."

"We're happy now," insisted Mrs. Wadham, sternly. Not for worlds would she have her husband suspect that she ever yearned for those old days in the middle western town when their modest cottage was the social center and the Ladies' Aid society her highest form of social disipation. "Those days you never had time for golf."

"Didn't know what it was," he confessed airily. "I didn't have to play to work off my superfluous flesh. I wasn't fat—I worked too hard."

Mrs. Wadham was silent. She was gazing in rapt delight at the approaching form of Mr. Denway.

There were those at the Harbor Hotel who watched Mrs. Wadham's game with ill-concealed amusement. There were others—Edith, and Denway himself—who suffered from her constant supervision—her scheme to thrust Edith upon his notice.

Edith herself was in a state of revolt, but after a whispered conversation with her father the old smile came back to her face and her eyes shone.

If it was just a game—why, it was time that dear, foolish mother was checkmated.

So Edith danced and rode and golfed and boated with the rich Mr. Denway—it proved to be Cecil—and Mrs. Wadham nodded and smiled and scribbled long lists and even surreptitiously ordered a few articles for Edith's trousseau. James Wadham whistled when he received the bills.

But, as Mrs. Wadham assured her husband, the sister-in-law of a countess must be properly attired.

"But, my dear," he feebly objected, "I don't believe Edith really loves the man!"

"I don't see how any sensible girl could help loving a Denway," she retorted, and was afterward angry at the silly remark.

Just when her hopes were at pinnacle point—they fell with a crash. It all happened at once.

Edith had been missing all afternoon and Cecil Denway had mooned around the piazza, reading the papers and yawning in a bored way. He didn't seem a bit interested when Mrs. Wadham cornered him and began to talk about Edith.

It was in the midst of a maternal eulogy of the sweetest daughter in the world that Mr. Denway leaped from his seat with a word of apology and rushed down the steps to meet a large motor car.

From the motor car descended a very pretty woman, who was ardently embraced by Cecil Denway. She was followed by four charming children and a French nurse.

"His sister-in-law, Mrs. Reggie, I presume?" said Mrs. Wadham to her nearest neighbor.
 But that dowager only smiled wickedly.

"Oh, no, his wife. She was one of the Evans girls. Reggie isn't married yet, though his engagement has just been announced. He's been spending the summer in Europe, you know."

Mrs. Wadham didn't know—she felt in that instant that she didn't know anything. Never again would she trust that false prophet, the blue book.

Her husband discovered her in their sitting room, the fatal book open on her lap. The page of Denways was blistered with tears.

"My dear," he said gently, "Edith is outside—with Dick Ainslee. They want to marry each other; I'm going to boost Dick—and I told Edith that of course you wanted her to marry the man she loved."

"Of course I do!" Mrs. Wadham smiled through her tears. "Tell them to come right in—and Jim—just throw this book in the fire!"

And she gave her husband the prized blue book.

Why should she keep it when Edith had flouted the social register and was marrying the man she loved?

"I'm very glad after all," she sighed, and she meant it.

NEW LISBON WINS

IN SCHOOL CONTESTS

IN BOTH DIVISIONS

NEW LISBON, Wis., May 7.—(Special).—At the Juneau county league oratorical and declamatory contest held in New Lisbon recently, New Lisbon won first place in both the boys' and girls' divisions. In the girls' contest Mattie Gray of New Lisbon, won first with "The Race for the Silver Cup."

Rosalie Adams of New Lisbon, won second with "The Inmate of the Dungeon."

In the boys' contest, Robert Hurd of New Lisbon, won first with "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death," and Arthur Murphy of Needah, won second with "A Eulogy over His Brother's Grave."

Mattie Gray and Robert Hurd will speak in the contest at La Crosse Normal school next Friday evening. The judges of the contest were W. P. Roseman, La Crosse; Lee H. Griffin, Chicago, and Amund Olson, Melvina.

The Senior class of the New Lisbon high school have chosen "The Professor" for their class play which will be given June 4. Graduation will take place on June 10th.

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa.—"When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache."

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was not so bad. I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound."—Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

A Fountain Bubbled Up and the Stranger Vanished.

Daddy's Bedtime

How the Star Dipper First Appeared.

ONCE upon a time the rain wouldn't come down. It was terribly sulky and remained right up in the sky and saw the flowers wither and the grass turn from a beautiful green to brown, and even the big trees feebly rustled their leaves and prayed for a drink." Daddy was telling the kiddies the evening story.

"The water dried up in the pretty little brooks, the rivers were so low that the boats could not navigate them, the fountains stopped bubbling, and the waterfalls stopped falling, and the cows and horses and kitties were all so thirsty, not to mention the men and women and little children."

"One poor little girl lived all alone with her mother at the foot of a mountain, where usually there was plenty of water from a beautiful brook that rippled and foamed and babbled down the side of the mountain. But of course the little brook suffered with the others, so it only dripped a tiny bit of water down the rock. The little girl's mother grew very ill, and Betty knew she must get water for her or she would die. So she ran with her little tin dipper and set it under the rock, and after awhile it was filled."

"Betty started back with it to her mother, but she met a little dog. It was so very thirsty that its little tongue hung from its mouth."

"Betty poured a tiny bit of the precious water into her palm and held it for the little dog to lap. Then the tin dipper turned to silver!"

"She ran on quickly, hoping there was still water enough for her mother, and when she reached the door a poor old woman was standing there so bent and faint from thirst that she could not speak."

"Give her some water," called Betty's mother. "She is very old and feeble. I can wait." So Betty obediently gave the little old lady a drink, and, lo and behold, the cup turned to gold!

"Betty hastened to her mother's bedside with the remaining water in the beautiful golden dipper, and her mother drank, and Betty was about to do the same when a knock sounded at the door."

"A stranger entered, pale, weary and faint from thirst. 'Take this water,' said Betty. 'I can go and get some more.'"

"The stranger smiled, took the dipper to the door, and it changed into a diamond cup. He turned the cup over, and the water splashed on to the ground. A fountain bubbled up, and the stranger vanished up in the sky. Looking for him, they saw twinkling there the diamond dipper. It is still there, a beautiful testimony to unselfishness."

Girls, Avoid Yellow Spots on the Teeth

"John, isn't it a pity Stella has such horrid teeth? What ugly yellow teeth she shows when she smiles, with that horrid gold front!"

Now, as a matter of fact, holes in the teeth and yellow teeth are usually caused by pure carelessness. When the teeth begin to turn yellow, blacken inside, little spots appear, when there is grit and tartar between the teeth and gums, when teeth are sore and begin to separate, when they are loose in their sockets, and wobble about, rock to and fro by the tongue, one can overcome these conditions quite easily. According to a German scientist, all you need to do is to get from your druggist about four ounces of fluid organ (you won't need more), and use morning, noon and night, merely holding a teaspoonful in the mouth a minute or so. The infestments and microbes will be washed out, the enamel cleansed of the dirty yellow, coating, and your own white enamel appear. The sensitiveness to heat and cold, to sweets and tobacco, will no longer be noticed. Your teeth will be firm and strong again, all the mouth, tongue, upper palate and teeth will be clean, the disease condition disappear, and you save yourself a bill for store teeth.

CHICAGO CHINESE HELP MOTHERLAND

CHICAGO, May 7.—Chicago Chinese yesterday rallied to the support of their country by starting what they expect to be a monster fund to add to the $100,000 subscribed in New York and the $75,000 gathered in Boston. The money is to be spent "for bullets, not for red cross."

While agents of the oriental republic were collecting money, others circulated petitions among their own people and among prominent Chicagoans appealing to President Wilson and the American government to aid in "preserving the integrity of a sister republic."

America seems to be getting in advance the usual reward for peace-makers.

WATER COMPANIES WIN ACKLEY BILL

MADISON, Wis., May 7.—(Special.)—The water power companies have won their fight before the senate conservation committee, and the assembly committee on state affairs, the Ackley bill, introduced in their behalf being favorably reported by both committees.

This outcome was expected as the committees have been looked upon as favorable to the power companies' contention. Senator Tompkins dissented from the senate committee's report, and Assemblyman Aulenbacher and Weber from the report of the assembly committee. Action was forced in the committees in the absence of Chairman Axel Johnson, who is looked upon as not favorable to the bill. But six of the eleven members were present, and but four of the eleven members of the committee voted for the bill.

The Ackley bill repeals the Hurling law enacted two years ago. Under the present law franchises for water powers are limited to thirty years. The new bill gives an unlimited term franchise, and contains other changes asked by the power companies.

JUDGE DIES IN FIRE

MADRID, May 7.—Fire broke out in the palace of justice, starting in the supreme court room. Judge Aranda, of the court of cassation, was overcome by smoke and perished while endeavoring to save court records. Many firemen were injured.

Owing to the failure of the water pressure, the flames spread rapidly and the entire edifice, which was erected in 1758 soon was ablaze.

BUY PASSAIC DAILY

CHESTER, Pa., May 7.—Charles R. Long, one of the proprietors of the Chester Times and Morning Republican, announced that he has organized a company and purchased the Passaic Daily Herald of Passaic, N. J. The price was close to $100,000. The Herald is one of two afternoon dailies in a city of 60,000 population.

NEWSIES SLIGHTLY MIXED

ST. PAUL, Minn., May 7.—Newsboys today threaten a revolt. During the sensational publicity given the Rev. James Darnell, they accustomed themselves to calling him "Mister Darnell." Then along came the bombardment of the Dardanelles. They thought they were right and when two ships were sunk in the Dardanelles the other day, the kiddies adopted the cry, "Wuxtry, British ship sunk by Mr. Darnell!"

ARRESTED AS HE GETS LICENSE

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., May 7.—As he and his new-found sweetheart were leaving the marriage license bureau with a license yesterday, Michael Konosa was arrested on a charge of breach of promise, preferred by Theresa Sochin. She said all arrangements had been made for their wedding, when her betrothed suddenly changed his mind. The girl he got a license to wed yesterday is Pelagio Tokienska. All three live at Manayunk.

DEED, 127 YEARS OLD, FILED

POTTSVILLE, Pa., May 7.—A deed, 127 years old, was filed today by George M. Roads for the estate of Robert Ditchburn, Tamaqua. The document is falling apart with age. The deed was conveyed by Robert Pitcher, of Fort Allan, for five shillings. The property is in Rahm township, this county, which at the time the deed was written, was located in Northampton county.

ACCOMMODATION TRAIN

BANKERS NOW ASK FOR INCOME TAX

MADISON, Wis., May 7.—(Special.)—The banks of the state have discovered that the income tax is a just and meritorious method of taxation, that the present form of administration is the best possible form and that they want to come under the provision of the law. These facts came out in a hearing before the joint finance committee in a hearing on the bill permitting banks to be taxed at their option on the basis of earnings under the income tax law, instead of a tax upon their stock as at present.

Russell Jackson appeared as counsel for the State Bankers' association contending that there was rank discrimination in the taxation of banks, that their taxes were based on approximately full value, while other personal property was not, that no other state taxed bank stock as high as Wisconsin, and that some of taxing districts assessed stock at as much as 25 per cent less than its book values, while others taxed it as much as 40 per cent of its book values.

NOON EXTRA!

120 AMERICANS AMONG 1,346 WHO WENT DOWN WITH THE LUSITANIA

FROHMAN, KLEIN AND ELBERT HUBBARD ARE LOST WITH VANDERBILT

Believed Only Fifty-One Out of 188 of United States Citizens of English Vessel Have Been Rescued—Struck While at Lunch.

Famous Americans who went down with the Lusitania:

ALFRED G. VANDERBILT.

CHARLES FROHMAN, noted theatrical producer.

CHARLES H. KLEIN, celebrated theatrical writer and producer, author of "The Lion and the Mouse."

ELBERT HUBBARD (Frau Elburtus), editor of the "Philistine", famous American publicist, and wife.

QUEENSTOWN, May 8.—Probably 120 Americans are victims of the torpedo which sank the giant Cunard liner Lusitania yesterday afternoon. As far as can be ascertained from the fragmentary information available, only fifty-one Americans, out of 188 known to have been on board, have been recovered. The total death list of the disaster sank to 1,346 this morning when forty-five more survivors were landed, and it became known that there were about 150 fewer persons on board than had at first been figured.

The big town hall here has been turned into a temporary morgue. Lines of coffins bearing the bodies of victims of the Lusitania tragedy are being placed in the main room. It is announced that all will be taken there for identification and that as fast as the names are ascertained they will be made public.

It is now proposed that the funerals of the victims be held on Sunday.

Crew Orderly
Latest advices from the Lusitania tragedy say that the crew was orderly during the final moments of the tragedy and did their best to launch their boats. Most of the survivors agree that two torpedoes struck the Lusitania, one completely shattering her engine room.

The first torpedo struck absolutely without warning in the stokehold. Splinters of steel flew high in the air and the great boat shook from stern to stem. Almost immediately afterward another explosion followed. The second torpedo completed the tragedy. Fumes from the explosion permeated every section of the smashed steamer. Many of the passengers fell to the deck unconscious. Others staggered to the boats and were helped on board.

The steamer was listing to starboard and many of her boats were useless.

Boat Capsizes
That at least one of the Lusitania's boats loaded with women and children capsized after it had been launched was stated here today by Bertrand Jenkin, of New York. He said that he had helped two women into the boat, one of them being Miss Bramwell, an opera singer of New York. The boat turned over after striking the water and only a few of those on board were rescued by another boat.

D. A. Thomas, Welsh colliery owner, who was among the saved, told a story of his experience. He said:

"We were at luncheon when suddenly the vessel was stopped and shook from stern to stern with the force of an explosion well forward, that seemed to throw her on her beam ends. We had not believed it possible that an attack would be made upon us but there was not a passenger who did not realize that the unexpected had happened. The explosion was followed by another equally forcible, and the big steamer shuddered and almost immediately began to list to port.

Little Panic Shown
"Officers and men rushed to their stations almost without orders, and the work of clearing the boats was begun. There was little panic so far as I could see; everyone was too dazed to realize just what actually was happening. For a few minutes we believed that the stories of the safety of the big liner would prove true and that she would stay afloat but the constantly increasing list showed that this hope was vain.

"Many of the passengers ran here and there about the decks, although Captain Turner and his officers tried their best to pacify them. Many of the women were hysterical and some of them, with infants in their arms, caught at the fastenings of the boats and hampered the launching. Altogether ten boats were finally swung over. Lady Mackworth was picked up unconscious after she had been in the water three hours. We had no warning and the big steamer sank

FIFTY-ONE AMERICANS SAVED SAYS CONSULAR LIST CABLED TODAY

WASHINGTON, May 8.—Total survivors of the Lusitania number 634, according to a state department cable received from the American consul at Queenstown, at 6 a. m. today.

This cablegram, signed by C. E. Laureat, says, after adding four names to an earlier list of survivors: "Very few others. Several unidentified corpses. Total survivors, 634. Americans proceeding Saturday afternoon, reach London Sunday."

The four names are:
N. N. Allis.
Patrick Slattery.
Mr. Byington.
Mrs. Brooks.
The earlier message received from Laureat at 3:00 a. m. follows:
"Following are American survivors. Other names will follow. Total saved, 700 of all nationalities."

within twelve or fifteen minutes after we were first hit.

"It was a dastardly outrage, deserving the condemnation of the entire civilized world.

Sea's Smoothness a Help

"It was a beautiful sunny day. The sea was smooth and to that is due the fact that anyone was saved. Had the water been rough or it had been night, everyone would have been lost.

"I doubt very much whether any of the port tide boats were launched. They were in such position that they could not be swung over the sides. The steamer was headed for the short the moment the explosion occurred. Captain Turner stuck to the bridge to the last and was picked out of the water three hours after the Lusitania foundered."

Ernest Cooper, a newspaper man from Toronto, who was among the rescued, said:

"I am afraid that many of the boats could not be cut away in time. The vessel sank very fast and carried many people down with her. There naturally was some confusion, but I saw no real panic. There were many women and about forty children in the second cabin who were under one year old."

Wrapped in a blanket and without any clothing, Julian de Ayala, the Cuban consul at Liverpool, was most cheerful, although he had a great gash in his leg, from which the blood streamed.

Many Thought Boat Would Float
"I boarded three boats before I finally got on in safety," he said. "The only reason that I was saved was that I remained quiet and trusted in the Lord. I prayed that I might be spared for the sake of my three children who are in the convent in Liverpool. I believe there were many on board who made no effort to get into the boats, believing that the steamer could not sink."

Majority were women. All are being taken to the temporary morgue in the town hall as fast as recovered and the admiralty has ordered that every effort be made to secure all victims.

The scenes on the quay here as the survivors arrived were pitiful in the extreme. Women wet and bedraggled, their faces lined with terror from the experience they had been through, were clinging to men, many of whom were only shirts and trousers. Nearly all were without shoes. Little children clung to their parents and cried bitterly. Two little tots helped ashore an elderly lady who had been a long time in the water and collapsed on the pier.

Charles C. Hardwick of New York said:

"I entered boat 17 under orders, but it was overturned soon after striking the water. I then swam to boat 19 which had in it 18 women, 15 children and 30 men. Afterward this boat picked up four other men and one woman and finally was towed safely to shore."

Many Leap Overboard

Rescued sailors say that Captain Turner and the officers did everything possible to keep the passengers quiet but that the women rushed from boat to boat and interfered with their being launched. Many of the ten boats that were launched were nearly filled when they struck the water. More than 100 passengers attached life belts to their bodies and leaped into the water before the Lusitania disappeared. A great many of those were rescued by the Lusitania's own life boats.

Although reports were in circulation that Alfred G. Vanderbilt had been saved a search for him has failed to locate the slightest trace, and his friends here have about given up hope that he was rescued.

LUSITANIA'S LOSS HAS BROUGHT ON POLITICAL CRISIS

Government to Be Swamped with Volley of Queries When Parliament Meets

BRITISH AWAIT WILSON'S COURSE

Incident Brings a Great Boom in Recruiting and Stirs England to Depths

LONDON, May 8.—The sinking of the Lusitania has brought about a political crisis in England. It is already certain that the government will be swamped with pointed inquiries when parliament reconvenes on Monday.

Lord Charles Beresford stated he will interrogate Premier Asquith. There will be a volley of questions for the officials of the government, as a number of members favor reprisals of equal violence directed against Germany.

Officials are anxiously awaiting information as to what action Washington plans to take. They want to know to what extent President Wilson plans to follow up his threats in the note addressed to Germany

Berlin Jubilant
COPENHAGEN, May 8.—The Berlin newspapers today proclaim in headlines of colossal type the torpedoing of the Lusitania and declare that Germany has registered a new triumph for her naval policy. The editorial comment generally declares that England received what she deserved.

last February. It is understood here the government will exchange views with Washington during the week end so that an understanding can be reached before parliament reopens Monday.

An enormous crowd besieged the Cunard offices all night and increased as day broke. All were anxious to learn the fate of relatives on board the lost Lusitania. The line officials said they were endeavoring to perfect a list of survivors but that this work would be delayed, as some had been landed at one port and some at another. They said there was little doubt that the list of saved would be less than seven hundred.

Relatives Ask After escort
Relatives of survivors were angrily asking why no effort was made to protect the Lusitania. They pointed out that it has been known for a week that an attack was to have been made on the big liner but that not a single destroyer—the real foe of the submarine—had been detached to act as an escort for her from the Atlantic.

Today's confirmation of the heavy loss of life in the torpedoing of the Lusitania which London last night disbelieved has stirred England more than anything else since the declaration of war.

Recruiting throughout the empire today had greatly stimulated and

WASHINGTON ASKS FOR GERMAN REPORT ON THE VESSEL'S DESTRUCTION

State Department Note to Berlin Desires That Statement From Submarine Commander Be Made—U. S. Not to Change Policy Says Stone.

WASHINGTON, May 8.—The state department today asked Berlin for a report on the Lusitania disaster. It expressed a desire that it be based on the statement of the submarine commander who made the attack—assuming that the liner was sunk by a submarine.

In effect the kaiser's foreign office was asked if Germany was responsible for the Lusitania's loss with that of Americans on board. If so, full details were wanted. The request was directed to Ambassador Gerard, in Berlin, to be presented to the German foreign office. Aside from this announcement, Secretary of State Bryan said:

"All we need to tell the public is that we are arriving at the facts as fast as possible and doing everything possible for the injured."

Pressed for details, the secretary admitted he had heard some one on the Lusitania saw a submarine's periscope, seemingly bearing out the theory that the vessel was torpedoed. He would not particularize any further.

The desirability of making a statement concerning the international legal aspects of the case was urged on him, but for the time he refused it.

A strained calm prevailed in official circles.

Except what Secretary Bryan said, no statement concerning the Lusitania case was obtainable. The White house and executive departments were silent.

Nobody pretended, however, to have anything but the liner's destruction and its possible effect on this country on his mind.

Just how soon a cabinet would be called to consider the situation could not be learned. The president spent the forenoon on the golf links. Secretary Bryan cancelled a dinner engagement at Bryan's Point, near Mt. Vernon.

"The sinking of the Lusitania," said Chairman Stone of the senate foreign relations committee, in an interview here last night, "is indeed an unfortunate affair, but how does it affect the administration's present attitude?"

"The Germans have a right to sink or do whatever they please with British ships and the British have identically the same right with respect to those of Germany."

large numbers are expected to flock to the colors over the week end. The spirit of vengeance seems at last to have penetrated the British calm and there is a far greater indignation everywhere expressed against the Germans than ever before.

The Manchester Guardian today after reviewing the tragedy, says: "The submarine campaign now has entered into a new phase which is marked by even greater recklessness for innocent lives than has gone before."

The Liverpool Post says: "If Germany had desired to have the power of the United States thrown into the scales of war against herself, she could not have chosen a more effective method of making her wish known."

Short Story

MRS. WADHAM'S CURE

BY WILLI STRONG

Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate

The sea flashed in the sunlight and Mrs. James Wadham blinked her eyes and turned them toward the cooling green of the golf links. Her glance sharpened as she recognized her husband's portly form.

A Fountain Bubbled Up and the Stranger Vanished.

Daddy's Bedtime

How the Star Dipper First Appeared.

ONCE upon a time the rain wouldn't come down. It was terribly sulky and remained right up in the sky and saw the flowers wither and the grass turn from a beautiful green to brown, and even the big trees feebly rustled their leaves and prayed for a drink. Daddy was telling the kiddies the evening story.

"The water dried up in the pretty little brooks, the rivers were so low that the boats could not navigate them, the fountains stopped bubbling, and the waterfalls stopped falling, and the cows and horses and kitties were all so thirsty, not to mention the men and women and little children."

"One poor little girl lived all alone with her mother at the foot of a mountain, where usually there was plenty of water from a beautiful brook that rippled and foamed and bubbled down the side of the mountain. But of course the little brook suffered with the others, so it only dripped a tiny bit of water down the rock. The little girl's mother grew very ill, and Betty knew she must get water for her or she would die. So she ran with her little tin dipper and set it under the rock, and after awhile it was filled."

"Betty started back with it to her mother, but she met a little dog. It was so very thirsty that its little tongue hung from its mouth."

"Betty poured a tiny bit of the precious water into her palm and held it for the little dog to lap. Then the tin dipper turned to silver!"

"She ran on quickly, hoping there was still water enough for her mother, and when she reached the door a poor old woman was standing there so bent and faint from thirst that she could not speak."

"Give her some water," called Betty's mother. "She is very old and feeble. I can wait." So Betty obediently gave the little old lady a drink, and, lo and behold, the cup turned to gold!

"Betty hastened to her mother's bedside with the remaining water in the beautiful golden dipper, and her mother drank, and Betty was about to do the same when a knock sounded at the door."

"A stranger entered, pale, weary and faint from thirst. 'Take this water,' said Betty. 'I can go and get some more.'"

"The stranger smiled, took the dipper to the door, and it changed into a diamond cup. He turned the cup over, and the water splashed on to the ground. A fountain bubbled up, and the stranger vanished up in the sky. Looking for him, they saw twinkling there the diamond dipper. It is still there, a beautiful testimony to unselfishness."

"Which one?"

"Search me! I didn't ask him. Seems to me I heard someone call him Cecil."

"Cecil Denway!" Meg Wadham grew pink with excitement. Her black eyes flashed.

Her husband recognized the signs and smiled inwardly.

"They've got all kinds of money," he egged her on.

"I know it—Jim. I've been thinking of Edith—you know she is too good for the best man on earth!"

"Right—for that reason she'll probably marry some good-for-nothing scamp who will expect me to support them both. I'm sure of it that I'm setting aside a certain sum of money for the purpose."

"Jim—you are too absurd. Fancy a Denway expecting you to support him!"

"A Denway—hey? Say, Meg, how long has Edith been acquainted with Reggie Denway?"

"I thought you said it was Cecil," she countered.

"Well—Cecil—Reginald—any old name that suits you. How long has she known any of the Denways?"

"Not at all—she has never met them."

"Then why worry about my supporting him? I think women are the most eccentric critters on this foot-stool!" James Wadham beckoned to a hotel servant, and was presently

Girls, Avoid Yellow Spots on the Teeth

"John, isn't it a pity Stella has such horrid teeth? What ugly yellow teeth she shows when she smiles, with that horrid gold front!"

Now, as a matter of fact, holes in the teeth and yellow teeth are usually caused by pure carelessness. When the teeth begin to turn yellow, blacken inside, little spots appear, when there is grit and tartar between the teeth and gums, when teeth are sore and begin to separate, when they are loose in their sockets and wobble about, rock to and fro by the tongue, one can overcome these conditions quite easily. According to a German scientist, all you need to do is to get from your druggist about four ounces of fluid organ (you won't need more), and use morning, noon and night, merely holding a teaspoonful in the mouth a minute or so. The infestments and microbes will be washed out, the enamel cleansed of the dirty yellow, coating, and your own white enamel appear. The sensitiveness to heat and cold, to sweets and tobacco, will no longer be noticed. Your teeth will be firm and strong again, all the mouth, tongue, upper palate and teeth will be clean, the disease condition disappear, and you save yourself a bill for store teeth.

served with two tall, cool glasses of orange juice. One of these he pushed across the table toward his wife.

He buried his aggressive nose in the other.

"Of course," said Mrs. Wadham imperturbably, "you will arrange for Edith to meet Mr. Denway—it's a chance in a lifetime. Cecil Denway is one of the richest men in the world and above the ordinary in character. The other Denway twin, Reggie, is married; he married one of the Evans girls—Beulah Evans married Count Ignace Spattico."

Mrs. Wadham rattled off these names with great complacency. She knew her social blue book from cover to cover. Although not of the social set whose doings she watched from afar and envied, her husband's millions often brought his wife and daughter in touch with the charmed circle.

Mrs. Wadham's one object in life was to marry her daughter to some one within the magic circle. Edith's indifference to the project and her husband's open amusement at her repeated failures nettled her into greater action.

"Edith shall marry this Denway," she said between her clenched teeth, and she fell into a brown study, planning, scheming, plotting to bring about the desired end.

With Edith married to Cecil Denway she would be a relative by marriage to the Countess Spattico, a triumph indeed over the old acquaintances who looked askance upon Meg Wadham's social ambitions.

Her husband's voice broke in on her thoughts.

"I recognized Dick Ainslee at once and asked him what he was doing down here. Said he was private secretary to Denham."

Mrs. Wadham shrugged impatiently. "It does seem as though Dick Ainslee was always appearing in the most unexpected places. It will be very disagreeable for him, when Edith marries Mr. Denway, to occupy a menial position in her household."

James Wadham grinned broadly. He did not tell his wife that when he had recognized Dick Ainslee on the beach a few hours ago Edith had been with him. The memory of Edith's face as she looked at Dick sealed her father's lips. But he could not help saying with a little sigh:

"Money isn't everything, my dear. We used to be mighty happy before I struck oil."

"We're happy now," insisted Mrs. Wadham, sternly. Not for worlds would she have her husband suspect that she ever yearned for those old days in the middle western town when their modest cottage was the social center and the Ladies' Aid society her highest form of social disputation. "Those days you never had time for golf."

"Didn't know what it was," he confessed airily. "I didn't have to play to work off my superfluous flesh. I wasn't fat—I worked too hard."

Mrs. Wadham was silent. She was gazing in rapt delight at the approaching form of Mr. Denway.

There were those at the Harbor Hotel who watched Mrs. Wadham's game with ill-concealed amusement. There were others—Edith, and Denway himself—who suffered from her constant supervision—her scheme to thrust Edith upon his notice.

Edith herself was in a state of revolt, but after a whispered conversation with her father the old smile came back to her face and her eyes shone.

If it was just a game—why, it was time that dear, foolish mother was checked.

So Edith danced and rode and golfed and boated with the rich Mr. Denway—it proved to be Cecil—and Mrs. Wadham nodded and smiled and scribbled long lists and even surreptitiously ordered a few articles for Edith's trousseau. James Wadham whistled when he received the bills.

But, as Mrs. Wadham assured her husband, the sister-in-law of a countess must be properly attired.

"But, my dear," he feebly objected, "I don't believe Edith really loves the man!"

"I don't see how any sensible girl could help loving a Denway," she retorted, and was afterward angry at the silly remark.

Just when her hopes were at pinnacle point—they fell with a crash. It all happened at once.

Edith had been missing all afternoon and Cecil Denway had mooned around the piazza, reading the papers and yawning in a bored way. He didn't seem a bit interested when Mrs. Wadham cornered him and began to talk about Edith.

It was in the midst of a maternal eulogy of the sweetest daughter in the world that Mr. Denway leaped from his seat with a word of apology and rushed down the steps to meet a large motor car.

From the motor car descended a very pretty woman, who was ardently embraced by Cecil Denway. She was followed by four charming children and a French nurse.

"His sister-in-law, Mrs. Reggie, I presume?" said Mrs. Wadham to her nearest neighbor.

But that dowager only smiled wickedly.

"Oh, no, his wife. She was one of the Evans girls. Reggie isn't married yet, though his engagement has just been announced. He's been spending the summer in Europe, you know."

Mrs. Wadham didn't know—she felt in that instant that she didn't know anything. Never again would she trust that false prophet, the blue book.

Her husband discovered her in their sitting room, the fatal book open on her lap. The page of Denways was blistered with tears.

"My dear," he said gently, "Edith is outside—with Dick Ainslee. They want to marry each other; I'm going to boost Dick and—I told Edith that of course you wanted her to marry the man she loved."

"Of course I do!" Mrs. Wadham smiled through her tears. "Tell them to come right in—and Jim—just throw this book in the fire!"

And she gave her husband the prized blue book.

Why should she keep it when Edith had flouted the social register and was marrying the man she loved?

"I'm very glad after all," she sighed, and she meant it.

NEW LISBON WINS IN SCHOOL CONTESTS IN BOTH DIVISIONS

NEW LISBON, Wis., May 7.—(Special.)—At the Juneau county league oratorical and declamatory contest held in New Lisbon recently, New Lisbon won first place in both the boys' and girls' divisions.

In the girls' contest Mattie Gray of New Lisbon, won first with "The Race for the Silver Cup."

Rosalie Adams of New Lisbon, won second with "The Inmate of the Dungeon."

In the boys' contest, Robert Hurd of New Lisbon, won first with "Give Me Liberty or Give Me Death," and Arthur Murphy of Necedah, was second with "A Eulogy over His Brother's Grave."

Mattie Gray and Robert Hurd will speak in the contest at La Crosse Normal school next Friday evening.

The judges of the contest were W. P. Roseman, La Crosse; Lee H. Griffin, Chicago, and Amund Olson, Melvina.

The Senior class of the New Lisbon high school have chosen "The Professor" for their class play which will be given June 4. Graduation will take place on June 10th.

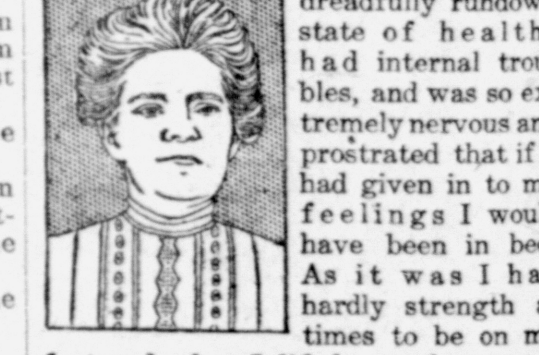

CALLS EXTRA SESSION

BATON ROUGE, La., May 7.—Governor Hall today issued a call for a special session of the Louisiana legislature May 17 to consider proposals for a constitutional convention next year, to enact laws for regulation of the sugar-refining industry and prohibit corporations from contributing to campaign funds to defeat constitutional amendments.

WOMAN WOULD NOT GIVE UP

Though Sick and Suffering; At Last Found Help in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Richmond, Pa. — "When I started taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I was in a dreadfully rundown state of health, had internal troubles, and was so extremely nervous and prostrated that if I had given in to my feelings I would have been in bed. As it was I had hardly strength at times to be on my feet and what I did do was by a great effort. I could not sleep at night and of course felt very bad in the morning, and had a steady headache."

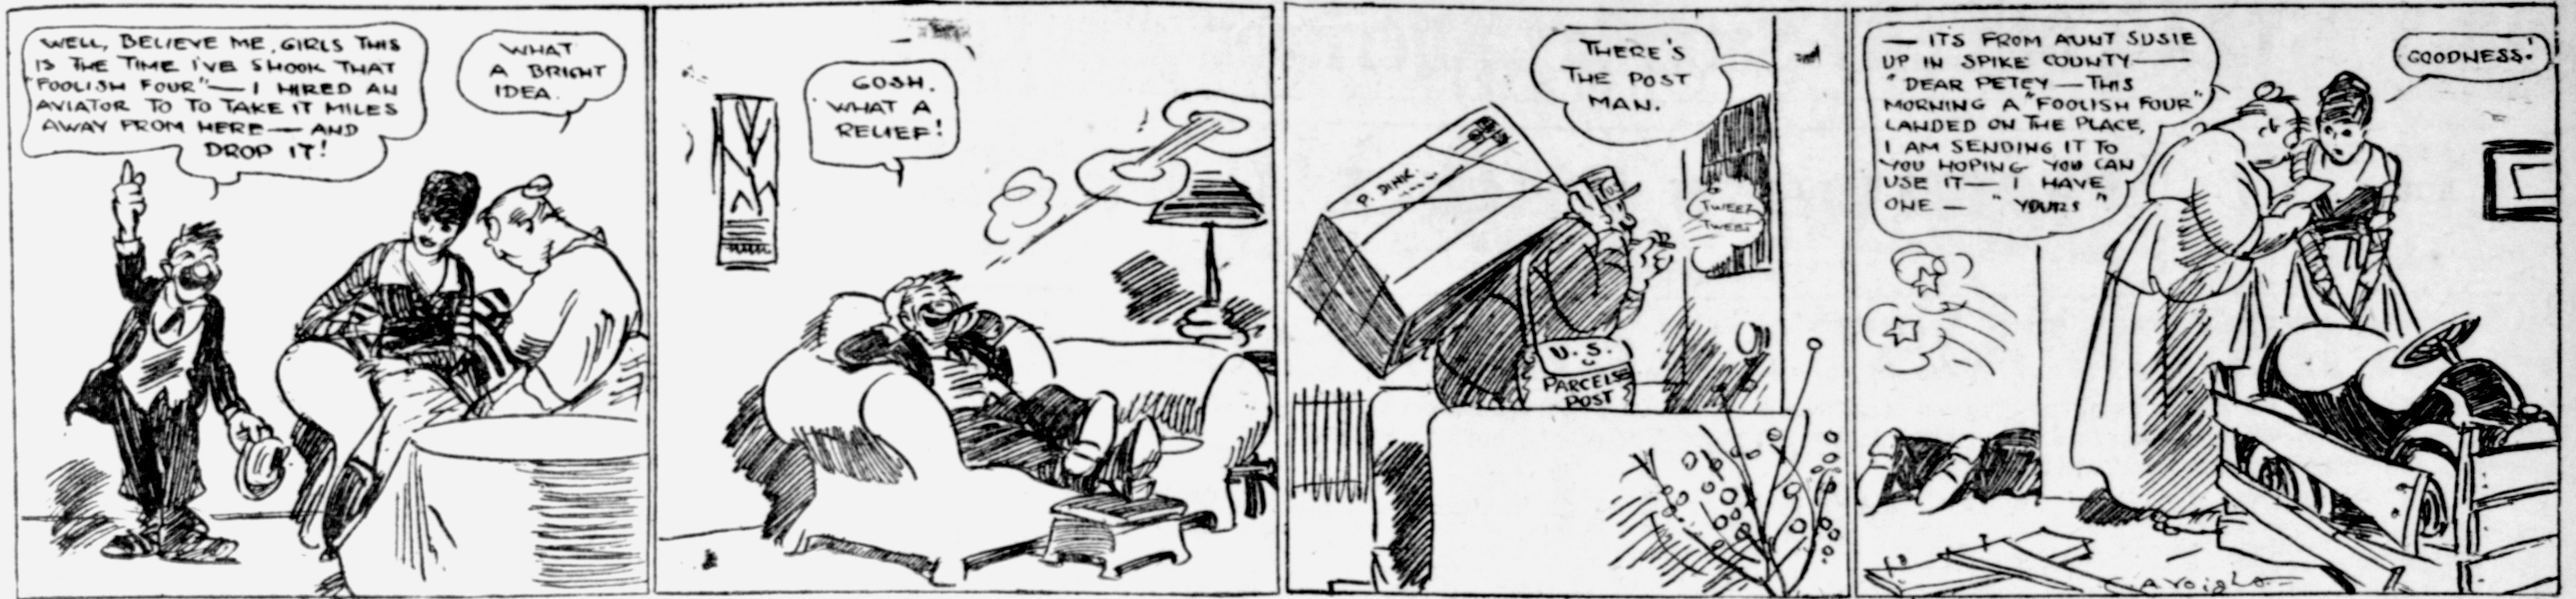

"After taking the second bottle I noticed that the headache was no so bad, I rested better, and my nerves were stronger. I continued its use until it made a new woman of me, and now I can hardly realize that I am able to do so much as I do. Whenever I know any woman in need of a good medicine I highly praise Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound." — Mrs. FRANK CLARK, 3146 N. Tulip St., Richmond, Pa.

Women Have Been Telling Women for forty years how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has restored their health when suffering with female ills. This accounts for the enormous demand for it from coast to coast. If you are troubled with any ailment peculiar to women why don't you try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound? It will pay you to do so. Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Doesn't Feaze These NEW YORK, May 8.—While the cable dispatches were bringing details of the Lusitania's sinking, four well dressed women walked calmly into the Cunard offices and bought tickets to sail next week on a Cunard liner for Liverpool.

The Bee in Literature. The bee has had a place in literature ever since there was a literature. Bees are frequently mentioned in our Scriptures. Classic poets rhymed the honey of Hybla, in Sicily, that being of incomparable quality, and it is a fact that the queens of the Hybla bees have been extensively imported to this country to improve the American stock.

Compromise on Drink Bill. LONDON, May 8.—It was officially announced this afternoon that an agreement has been reached between all of the political leaders and that a modified drink bill will be introduced and passed. Lloyd-George is said to retain simply government control over all public houses in the armament and ship yards areas.

Danish Steamer Sunk. RAMSGATE, England, May 8.—The Danish steamer Cathay, of 2,556 tons, has been sunk in the North sea presumably by striking a mine. Her passengers and crew numbering 43, were landed here today in small boats.

Murder in Church. Dr. Theodore Gonzales, while kneeling in prayer in the parish church of Pesaron, Spain, was attacked by one of his patients, who severed his head with a carving knife.

Handicaps to Church. The church is also handicapped by the persevering person who gets converted every winter, but whose religion won't keep through the summer.—Acheson Globe.

Immune From Many Diseases. Men attending the pans in salt works are generally supposed to be exempt from cholera, smallpox, scarlet fever and influenza.

All the Difference. "In India a lac of rupees is a fortune." "And in America a lack of dollars is a misfortune."—Boston Transcript.

Melrose Sunday

SPARTA, Wis., May 7.—(Special)
—The annual convention of the trustees and superintendents of Wisconsin asylums will be held at Sparta
June 8, 9 and 10.

The committee on arrangements held its first meeting Wednesday night and appointed Harley Jefferson chairman of a committee on transportation.

Extensive plans are being made to take care of the members of the convention in a royal manner, and all will be guaranteed a fine time.
Automobile rides, banquets and speeches are on the program.

The secretary was here a short time ago and completed arrangements whereby the Sidney will be the official headquarters.
Another meeting of the committee will be held May 19 and further plans will be made.
It is a privilege for as small a city as Sparta to entertain this delegation and everything in the power of Sparta will be done to entertain the visitors.

Woman's Health Requires Care

Women are so constituted as to be peculiarly susceptible to constitutional and their general health depends in large measure on careful regulation and correction of this tendency. Their delicate organisms rebel at the violence of cathartic and purgative remedies, which, while they may afford temporary relief, shock the system and seriously disturb the functional organs. A mild laxative is far preferable and, if properly compounded, much more effective.

The combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin sold in drug stores under the name of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is ideal for women's use. A free trial bottle can be obtained by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 452 Washington St., Monticello, Ills.

War Oddities

PARIS.—British war nurses dressed in khaki not unlike the regular soldiers' uniform who arrive here are called "Lady Kitcheners."

LONDON.—Describing the artillery action at Hill No. 60 a wounded
"Tommy" in a London hospital said it was a "red hot sort of hell."

LONDON.—A story from the front tells how a British infantryman put on a pair of socks sent by a benevolent sympathizer and marched all day. He suffered agony but could not stop. That night he drew a stiff piece of wadded writing paper from the sock inscribed in a bold feminine hand: "God bless the wearer of these socks."

WARSAW.—Russian peasant women acting as volunteer guards along railway lines and at prison camps.

BOLT CAUSES DAMAGE

COATESVILLE, Pa., May 7.—This city was visited by a severe electric storm recently. A bolt of lightning came out of the sky which had become as dark as night and appeared to illuminate everything for a second. Several persons were stunned on the street and in the mills, glass was shattered from the windows of many houses and scores of telephones were put out of commission all from the one bolt.

Even if a surprise party was a success, what was accomplished?

EASY TO DARKEN YOUR GRAY HAIR

You can Bring Back Color and Lustre with Sage Tea and Sulphur

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell, because it's done so naturally, so evenly. Preparing this mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. For 50 cents you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use tonic called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and, after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully darkened, glossy and luxuriant. You will also discover dandruff is gone and hair has stopped falling.
Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and look years younger."

GETS JERSEY JUSTICE

SUNBURY, Pa., May 7.—John Miller, 20 years old, New York, got a taste of Jersey justice in the United States court. Judge C. B. Witmer, sitting. He was indicted at 3:30 for robbing a postoffice at Chincilla, a suburb of Scranton. Five minutes later he had signed a plea of guilty, and in another five minutes was sentenced to serve three years in the Eastern Penitentiary. At 4 o'clock he was on a train en route for Philadelphia to start his term.
